Foreword

To open the doors of learning to all—that has been the achievement of the American High School. In it are found untold opportunities for advancement and education. But these become available only through the medium of the printed word.

Five centuries ago the printed word had not yet come into being. Not until the invention of the Gutenberg press in 1441 was the widespread dissemination of learning made possible. As the art of printing progressed, so progressed the education of the people.

Therefore, it is particularly appropriate in this anniversary year, to present to you the record of Brookline High School for 1940-41, through the theme of the development of printing.

WILFRED H. RINGER

BROOKLINE [illegible]

This year is Mr. Ringer's tenth in service as headmaster of Brookline High School, and at this time, the Murivian Committee takes great pleasure in paying tribute to the achievements which have been his within this decade.

Mr. Ringer was educated in the environs of Boston, graduating from Boston Latin School, and receiving degrees from Tufts College. He then taught English in the Chicago schools and in Auburn, New York, where he also coached football. For the next several years he headed the department of English at Holyoke High School, and from there went to serve as headmaster in Leominster High School. The next eleven years saw Mr. Ringer as headmaster at Gloucester High School, from which he came to Brookline.

During Mr. Ringer's headmastership here at Brookline, he has effected many valuable changes. Notable among these is the now-famous House Plan, which has afforded each student greater opportunities to participate in school activities and to feel at home in such a complex organization as a large high school. Then too, many new clubs have been founded to provide students with more avenues of expression.

In these ten years the High School has also grown physically. The most important structural change has been the addition of several modern sections to replace that part of the "old school" destroyed by the catastrophic fire of 1936.

Besides directing the administration of the High School, Mr. Ringer has found time to indulge in many supplementary interests. Those in the field of education include the following: Vice-President, the New England Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools and past Chairman of the Public Secondary School Division; member, Executive Committee and Committee of Uniform College Administrative Forms, National Association of Secondary School Principals; member, Executive Committee, C.E.E.B. (only public secondary school representative); Secretary-Treasurer, Massachusetts High School Principals' Club; past Director, Massachusetts Schoolmasters' Club; former chairman of several important committees, State Department of Education; delegate, Massachusetts Teachers' Federation; member, Harvard Teachers' Association.

Mr. Ringer has given a course at Massachusetts State Teachers' College, and was University Lecturer at Tufts College in March of this year. He has frequently delivered addresses at both educational and communal meetings, such as those of Harvard and Tufts College Teachers' Associations; the State Teachers' Associations of Massachusetts, New Hampshire, and Connecticut; and the Federated Council of Churches, New England section.

In community service Mr. Ringer has been active in Scouting, holding the post of Chief Justice, Brookline Boy Scout Court of Honor and serving as a member of the Boston Council of Honor; and as a member of the Boston and Brookline District Councils. In addition, he is now serving as chairman of the Pilot Committee of the Brookline High School Mariner Ship, "Westward Ho."

In the civic field, he not only organized the Rotary Club of Brookline, but served as its first president, and its immediate past president and member of its Board of Directors.

To those of us now about to leave the walls of Brookline High School, Mr. Ringer has been an understanding guide and counsellor. Much of what the school has contributed to our knowledge and growth has been made possible by his wise leadership. We extend to him our sincere wishes that the new decade upon which he now enters, may continue to realize the many hopes and plans he has for Brookline High School.

MISS MARY W. SAWYER
DEAN OF GIRLS

My cordial greetings to the Class of 1941! When the first Shailer House selected its motto seven or eight years ago, it probably little realized how very vital "Ever Onward" would be to us today Now, with the confusion of prejudice and propaganda all about us, the way ahead is far from clear for individuals or nations . . . No one of us can foresee the outcome of the world struggle or what our part in it will be. Much of the time the road we travel is dark or shadowed, sometimes a sudden flash of light gives us our bearings. Through it all we must go forward! Now, as never before, is our country in need of clear thinking, clean-living young men and women.

During your high school days you have met new situations, you have overcome obstacles, you have trained yourselves to be responsible citizens of the school community, you have caught a glimpse of the beauty and joy of service to others. Those of us who have known you in the Brookline High School are confident you will ever go forward to take up the task awaiting you. It is not an easy future that you see before you today. It will call for courage, devotion to high ideals, loyalty, sacrifice. "Ever Onward" is a challenge and an inspiration to the graduates of 1941! Our very best wishes go with you as you meet life's problems and joys!

Loyally yours,
MARY W. SAWYER.

PAUL A. WILLIAMS

The class of 1941 takes great pleasure in dedicating this 1941 Murivian to Paul A. Williams. We earnestly desire to acknowledge Mr. Williams' contributions during his fourteen years of inspiring teaching service. He has brought a wide variety of interests and capacities to the service of the student body; and his tireless efforts to improve the institutions of Brookline High School have greatly enriched student life. Above all else, we feel that the ideals he has set before us of perfection, accuracy, and completeness in everything have become a vital force in Brookline High School.

English

ALICE HOWARD SPAULDING

When Miss Spaulding is not busy as head of the school's largest department or teaching in Bates College summer session or writing books, she may be found with her Irish Setters. Considering her numerous contacts with pupils, it's no wonder she states, "I find dogs very desirable companions." Besides her pets, she enjoys knitting (for the British), housekeeping, music, theater, and reading.

ADA B. DEAL

When Miss Deal is not teaching English, she is usually occupied in helping the students to improve the school paper, the Sagamore. She is also the secretary of the English Department and has charge of the Remedial Reading division of that department. She is extremely interested in the theater, and has appeared in several church plays in the past year.

WILLIAM G. GRINNELL

A comparative new-comer to Brookline High School, Mr. Grinnell bears a heavy program of outside activities. He is assistant coach of the football team, a sport in which he has starred, and is faculty adviser to the Touchdown Club and the Shailer House Council. Supplementing these activities, he teaches a full day's program of English.

GRACE M. ALLEN

Miss Allen teaches English, and recalls that she herself sat as a student in the classrooms of Brookline High. Her extra-curricular responsibilities are many, and include serving as faculty adviser of the Chess Club, as assistant adviser of the English Club, as faculty member of Roberts House Council, and as Chairman of the School's Auditorium Committee.

ARTHUR W. FLEMINGS

During the summer he tutors at Long Lake Lodge, Bridgton, Me.

PATIENCE B. HENDERSON

The major innovation in next year's course of study is due to Mrs. Henderson and her recently organized Social Customs classes. She endeavors to develop in the students the art of getting along with people, a growth of personality, and habits of gracious living. In addition, she serves as chairman of the Civic English Curriculum.

Department

ELEANOR R. JOHNSON

Miss Eleanor Johnson is chairman of commercial English in the high school and also holds the position of attendance supervisor for Roberts and Lincoln House girls. Prominent in Roberts House affairs, she acts as their Girls' League faculty advisor; this Murivian owes its present name to her inspiration.

CELINA H. LEWIS

A lover of books, Miss Celina Lewis is best known to us as instructor in English and head of the Literary Circle of the English Club. She also collaborates with Mr. Gould in coaching the Radio Club, in whose broadcasts she has participated, and spends her evenings writing articles and teaching at the Boston Center for Adult Education.

VERA E. LIBBY

Although this is Miss Libby's first year as a regular member of the High School English staff, she substituted last year during Mr. Wilkinson's absence and will always be remembered by Runkle graduates. During the fall, illness forced her to go to Florida and she has since entertained her classes with stories of some of her adventures there.

FRANCIS W. NEWSOM

The only quiet person in the Sagamore Room on Tuesdays is Mr. Newsom. There he corrects copy and helps students with their stories. He likes to teach English to Brookline students but enjoys his hours of leisure when he can give his attention to his own poetic compositions.

MARY W. SAWYER

The long line outside of the Dean of Girls' office might mean that Miss Sawyer is either giving advice as Housemaster and Council member of Shailer House or as head of the Girls' League and member of the School Activities Committee. She also holds memberships in the Brookline Girl Scout Council, National Association of University Women, and National Association of Deans of Women.

ALBERT SEAMANS

The first red feather worn in the high school during the Community Fund campaign usually belongs to Mr. Seamans, as he is intensely interested in such work. In addition to teaching English, the Roberts House Council greets him as Housemaster. Soon to be finished is the book on remedial reading that he is writing in collaboration with Miss Deal.

PHILANDER H. WEBSTER

One of Brookline's newest teachers, Mr. Webster has taught in the past at the Northwood School and the Fairfield High School. His particular interest is collecting books, but he also enjoys bridge, tennis, riding, and travel. To help the Debating Society, he has been acting as faculty adviser.

TRASK H. WILKINSON

A most genial member of the English Department is Mr. Wilkinson, faculty adviser for the English Club and a member of the School Council for Shailer House. Not content with that, however, he gives courses at the Boston Center of Adult Education, and, in the summer, tutors at Long Lake Lodge, Maine.

PAUL A. WILLIAMS

Although he himself states that he teaches English and less English, or none at all, Mr. Williams finds himself one of the busiest instructors in school. He is a member of the Committee on Composition in English Courses, and has full charge of the English Book Room. As faculty adviser of the Murivian, he has devoted countless hours toward making it a success.

Mathematics Department

RALPH D. McLEARY

Head of the Mathematics Department. Mr. McLeary is responsible for all work done in that field. Once a student at the high school. Mr. Bates returned in 1933 to his old alma mater as a teacher of mathematics. Since this time. he has acquired two major assignments — head of the marshal system and coach of the hockey team. "Bucky". as he is affectionately called by his associates, is a sports enthusiast. specializing in both tennis and track.

MARIAN BATES

That swift traveling ball zipping down the fairway might have been whammed by Miss Bates, a lover of all sports, but particularly golf, fishing and swimming. During the winter. as teacher of Mathematics and a member of the Testing Department. she find little time for these activities. but in the summer she can enjoy them at her cottage in Lowell.

HELEN S. COLLINS

To what interests would a mathematics teacher and Girls' League advisor devote herself on a holiday? If one may use Miss Collins as an example. she would enjoy current events, literature. music, and drama. In addition. she would write a book. to be published in the indefinite future.

HARRY J. DOWNES

An "all-American". and an inspiration to his athletes. Mr. Downes produces winning football teams for Brookline. In the spring. he shifts his activities from the gridiron to the diamond. where he coaches the J.V. baseball team. During the school day. Mr. Downes teaches algebra and serves as faculty adviser to the Touchdown Club.

THOMAS E. FITZGERALD

Although called Mr. Fitzgerald. the boys in his mathematics classes. and on the athletic field have fondly labeled him as "Fitzy". In the fall he may be found coaching freshman football. in collaboration with the Physical Education Department. Spring finds our bachelor coach instructing Brookline's nines and turning out many a hard-hitting team.

ANNA R. LIDEN

As headmaster of Akers House. Miss Liden was last year presented a gift by the pupils of the graduating class. Now. in addition to teaching mathematics, she takes attendance for Shailer House. an energetic task, and interests herself in the Red Cross work which is being carried on in the High School.

Commercial Department

KELSEY C. ATTICKS

In addition to serving as head of the Commercial Department, Mr. Atticks also acts as the Treasurer of Brookline High School's activities funds. In this latter capacity, he supervises all accounts and has the histories of each school organization at his finger tips. He now teaches both Business Law and Economics, in addition to serving as adviser to penmanship classes.

JANE BERRIMAN

Most of the girls who are earning extra money by working after school hours can thank Miss Berriman for her aid as supervisor of employment for girls. She teaches typewriting and junior business training in the High School, and also teaches law and economics at Boston University.

CHRISTIAN WALTER EHNES

Seeing the imposing list of Junior Business Training, Business Training and Bookkeeping courses that Mr. Ehnes teaches, many people wonder how he finds time to supervise the financial and business activities of the Sagamore. He serves also as attendance supervisor for Akers House boys and helps Mr. Atticks in boy placement.

M. S. GREENSHIELDS

Besides teaching stenography and typewriting during the school day, Miss Greenshields is assistant Treasurer of all Brookline High School activities, an extremely responsible post. In addition to these activities, she serves on the following important committees: the American Education Week Committee, the Book Week Committee, and the Home Room Committee.

GRACE A. HAMBLIN

Typewriting and stenography is an exacting and tedious job to teach every day, so for enjoyment Miss Hamblin has taken up golf and swimming. She is quite an expert golfer and spends many a summer afternoon on the links or cools herself with a long swim.

ANNA L. MAGUIRE

Many a student can attribute his neat rows of figures, tidy bookkeeping, and fast, legible typewriting to the efforts of Miss Maguire. Besides teaching commercial subjects, she is in charge of the Commercial Department Stock Rooms and is co-chairman with Mr. Ehnes of the Examination Schedule Committee.

ADELINE F. NICKERSON

Miss Nickerson is a familiar sight around the typewriter room, where she teaches Junior Business Training and Bookkeeping. A member of the Home Room and Auditorium Committees and past Treasurer of all Houses, she is a member of the Shailer House Council, School Council, and an adviser of the Spanish, Foods, and Camera Clubs.

EMMA POLAND

It is practically impossible to find Miss Poland during school afternoons, for she is always busy. But the first place to hunt for her is at a meeting of the Girl Scout Mariners. She is also head of Akers House, teaches office practice, and plays an active part in Girls' League affairs.

Science

LELAND G. HOLLINGWORTH

"Please, Mr. Hollingworth, I've written my equations over 50 times. Can't I leave now?" This might be heard any afternoon when opportunity periods meet, for no teacher is more thorough than this head of the Science Department. Chemistry and radio are his main interests and he especially enjoys tinkering with short wave and amateur radio broadcasts.

DOROTHY ABEL

Miss Abel came to Brookline from the Cohoes High School back in 1939. While at Middlebury College in Vermont, she was active in sports, social and scholastic activities, and the editing of the Junior Year Book; then going to Syracuse University for her master's degree. Her hobby, as is fitting for a teacher in the Science Department, is astronomy.

KATHERINE L. BRUCE

Most versatile member of the faculty is Miss Bruce, connected with the science department as a biology teacher. She lists music, travel, reading, stamp-collecting and theatre-going among her numerous diversions, and in addition, has shared the duties of faculty adviser to the Girl Scouts with Miss Nichols for four years.

V. RUSSELL BECK

Though a teacher of Science at Brookline High School, Mr. Beck is currently involved in the organization of a new course of study for the grade schools. This course is designed to provide for some of the present weaknesses in the science courses taught throughout the entire eight grades in the grammar schools.

WARREN L. BARTLETT

Mr. Bartlett has, for several years, held the extremely important post of director of the Evening School. During the day, however, he instructs the scientifically-minded students of Brookline High School in the mysteries of biology. This subject has proved of great value to him in the past by providing him with numerous toads for his garden.

NELLIE M. CAMPBELL

A teacher in the chemistry division of the Science Department, Miss Campbell spends part of her spare time doing Red Cross volunteer work. In June she journeys to New York to serve as a College Board reader; then enjoys traveling on to her summer home in Nova Scotia.

Department

EDWARD B. COOPER

Mr. Cooper, until now hiding his light under a bushel, is discovered to be a frequent contributor to "School Science and Mathematics". Between sessions of the High and Evening schools, whenever not at a meeting of the Science Club or Student Council, he may be found indulging in his favorite hobbies of skiing and photography.

ALFRED C. WEBBER

The heap of cameras on Mr. Webber's desk will show perhaps that this is the afternoon for a Camera Club Meeting, of which he has charge. Housemaster of Packard House, he teaches both General Science and Physics, and offers his classes much special information on telescopes. But of all accomplishments, his proudest is the twins.

CARROLL H. LOWE

If you should pass a brand new house some evening and hear the strains of a Beethoven Symphony, you might be going by the residence of Mr. Lowe. A lover of music, he is also intensely interested in his subject, physics, and is proud of the fact that he is a veteran of the first World War.

BERTRAM H. HOLLAND

To find your spectacles, the man to see for information regarding them is Mr. Holland, in charge of the Lost and Found Department, as well as teaching both biology and general science. For the information of all underclassmen, he will be the new Packard House chief next year.

E. MONTGOMERY WELLS

In addition to teaching Physics, Mr. Wells coaches the track team. Himself a nationally known track star a few years ago, Mr. Wells has produced many fine interscholastic teams and individual stars. Mr. Wells' other interests include motion picture photography and lecturing on travels and sports. He is also the adviser of the Track Club.

Physical Education Department

THOMAS H. HINES

Mr. Hines, head of the town's Physical Education Department, has worked enthusiastically in the promotion of student physical education, both in class periods and in extra-curricular activities. He has provided an opportunity to participate in almost every competitive sport. Mr. Hines ranks high among men in his field.

NORMA ALLEN

Known to Brookline High School girls only in the capacity of an instructor in field hockey, basketball, and riding, Miss Norma Allen possesses hidden talents. For she also teaches at the Charlestown Evening Center, and receives the "punishment" she metes out during the week, as a member of the All-Boston Hockey team.

CHARLES A. BEMIS

As gym instructor at Brookline High School for many years, Mr. Bemis has spent much of his time in promoting the physical education of the students. As part of this program, he has adopted several extra-curricular activities. Among these are coaching the intra-mural basketball games, coaching the freshman baseball team, and directing the playground work at Griggs Field.

JOHN B. DUNN

The coach who is to be seen furiously blowing his whistle during Freshman football practice is none other than Mr. Dunn. He is an important member of the Physical Education staff, and may be found during the week teaching gymnastics at the Pierce and Driscoll grammar schools, as well as at the High School.

FRANCIS T. BALL

Mr. Ball specializes in instructing pupils of the Lawrence and Heath schools in the art of physical education. At the high school, he treats himself to a healthy workout in his capacity of coach to the Junior Varsity football squad. As might well be expected, his particular interest is hockey.

HARRY E. BROWN

"Now, come on, John. Swing! Hit that ball!" This might well be Mr. Brown giving a member of the golf team a lesson on the why's and wherefore's of the game. Besides coaching the golf team, he is also an instructor of physical education and especially enjoys giving exercises on the parallel bars.

RACHEL L. KELLEY

The voice calling out "One, two — one, two" at class day rehearsals might well have belonged to Miss Kelley, gym instructor for girls. Teacher specifically of the pupils who have unfortunately gotten low marks in their physical fitness tests, she has been recuperating from a severe attack of pneumonia that she had this winter.

Latin Department

JANE W. PERKINS

Head of the Latin Department is Miss Jane Perkins, who has devoted many years to the study of the classics and possesses many old books and Latin dictionaries. She is the faculty adviser for Alpha Pi Honorary Society, and has greatly helped to give this organization the enviable position it holds in the school today.

CAROLINE V. COOKE

Miss Cooke likes to spice the "amo's" and "amat's" of Freshman Latin, Caesar and Cicero, with descriptions and pictures or discuss the customs of the ancients. Her chief complaint against the present international situation is that it has prevented her from visiting Rome.

BENJAMIN D. ROMAN

Fittingly, Mr. Roman teaches the Roman language and makes the course unusually interesting by pointing out the similarities between present day wars and those fought during Caesar's time. He is an active member of the Court of Justice and teaches also at the Franklin Union Technical Institution.

CHESTER G. SEAMANS

Memorable this year was the sight of Mr. Seamans marching in the parade of World War veterans, gleaming with medals. He is extremely interested in Boys' Club activities, and besides teaching Latin at the high school, instructs at the Episcopal School of Religious Instruction, Lawrence, and the Thorn Mountain Summer School in Jackson, New Hampshire.

CONGETTA S. VANACORE

For those who are planning to take College Boards and who want a thorough background and training in Latin, be sure to meet Miss Vanacore. She was absent for several months this year because of illness but was able to continue for the remainder of the season. She likes to collect fine books and spends many winter evenings reading.

Modern Language

KATHRYN L. O'BRIEN

Pupils taking sophomore French are this year using Miss O'Brien's new book Second Year French, and the school is eagerly waiting for another textbook, now in preparation. She heads the newly formed Modern Language Department, and every summer acts as an instructor in the French Summer School at Middlebury College.

GENEVA F. CHAMBERLAIN

As with the majority of Brookline's teachers in the Modern Language Department, Miss Chamberlain particularly enjoys traveling. When not engaged in teaching French to the high school's eager students, her other extra-curricula interests are music, drama, and art. A well-known fact is that she is a great friend of Miss Ricker's. She may often be discovered listening avidly to French lectures at Harvard.

PAUL W. MATHER

If you should happen to go near Room 131 some day after school, you would find Mr. Mather either rehearsing pupils for a French Club play or checking French books, of which he takes sole charge. In the summer, unlike those who relax, he is business manager of a Y.M.C.A. Camp in New Hampshire.

DIEPOLD FRIEDLAND

As faculty adviser to the German Club, the Red Cross, the Boys' Club, and the Lincoln House Council, Mr. Friedland is certainly one of the School's busiest individuals. Tall and well-built, he may be seen any Friday afternoon knocking down the pins with the Boys' Club bowling group.

ALINE PERRIN

Just back from her sabbatical year, Miss Perrin reveals that she had many harrowing experiences in France and was barely able to escape the war and secure passage on a ship bound for home. She enjoys teaching French and is now the busy chairman of the French Club, assisted by Madame Wilkinson and Mr. Mather.

Department

MARGUERITE PFLEGHAAR

Travel to distant parts of the world and enjoyment of good music are special interests of Miss Pfleghaar. She is an active member of the French Department and has been appointed with Miss Holbrook to assume charge of the Louise Gambrill Memorial Museum.

E. LENORE PLACIDO

The Circulo Espanol would indeed suffer were it deprived of the help and tireless energy of Miss Placido. Small and dark, with a friendly smile for everyone, she injects into her course a true flavor of Spain, and plans exhibits and outings for the Spanish Club, of which she is a faculty adviser.

JANE G. RICKER

Those who have been taught by Miss Ricker are noted for their perfect French accents, in which she drills her pupils well. In class, she tells entertaining stories of her adventures in France, and after school she divides her time between doing work with the Girls' League and the School Council.

ALBERT SHEPARD

It is doubtful if there is any language in the curriculum which Mr. Shepard does not know how to teach. This term he is instructing in French and Spanish, but he has taught Latin and occasionally English. He is an adviser of the Sagamore's circulation department, and is Packard House faculty member of the School Council.

FLORA VARRIN WILKINSON

A newcomer to Brookline High School, Madame Wilkinson has plunged in to teach French to high school students, supplementing her regular work at the Pierce, Lincoln, and Runkle schools. She knows many interesting stories about France and she will sometimes relate them if one can find her in a free moment at the French Club meetings.

REBEKAH WOOD

Each year sees an increasing interest in Spanish, so says Miss Wood. A firm believer in hobbies, she has collected, in scrapbook form, all the Sagamore articles about El Circulo Espanol for the past several years. As one might imagine, she serves along with Miss Placido as faculty adviser of the Spanish Club.

Manual Training Department

MINOT AUSTIN BRIDGHAM

Although Mr. Bridgham is in charge of manual training, his specialty is woodworking, and many of the beautiful objects turned out by that department have been done under his guidance. In the evening he supervises the Men's Division of the Brookline Evening Vocational School and often snatches a few minutes away from his work to read a book written about his field.

GUY O. EDMUNDS

With the need for national defense daily increasing, Mr. Edmunds' work becomes of utmost importance. He is the supervisor of the National Defense Training Program in Machine Work, collaborating with the Brookline School Department and the State Department of Education. He also instructs in the Evening School, as well as being Vice President of the Wentworth Institute Alumni Association.

EVERETT J. McINTOSH

State Director of the National Education Association, past-President of the Massachusetts Teachers' Federation, Chairman of the Weymouth Park Commission, member of the Eastern Arts Association, and consultant of the National Broadcasting Company Education Policies Commission, is Mr. McIntosh—and one wonders how there is time to teach Mechanical Drawing in both the grammar and high schools.

HAROLD B. SYLVESTER

Although most of us recognize Mr. Sylvester as one of the staff that teaches Mechanical Drawing, few of us know of his other accomplishments. Besides being an important member of the Boy Scout Council, this year he has had articles and publications printed in the English Journal, the School Board Journal, the Instructor, Educational Method, and The Platoon School.

ARTHUR C. HOLTON

The electricity department has been missing one of its most able teachers this year. Mr. Holton, one of the main stays of the Radio Club, was struck down by a car early in the fall. Although he was on the danger list for some time, at the time of writing he is well on the road to recovery.

CARL A. SMITH

The man with the large pot of geraniums on his window sill is none other than Mr. Smith, whose love of gardening is exceeded only by his interest in printing. He teaches printing at the High School and the Brookline Evening Vocational School, and follows the work of the National Graphic Arts Education Guild with care.

FREDRICK L. WOODLOCK

Not one person who has been taught Mechanical Drawing by Mr. Woodlock has failed to find that course one of the most interesting in the high school, and many have continued in advanced studies in this field. A genial fellow, with a twinkle in his eye, Mr. Woodlock also instructs at the Lawrence School.

Music Department

WILLIAM B. BURBANK

Mr. Burbank, supervisor of music in all Brookline Schools, takes complete charge of the Freshman Glee Club, the Boys' Glee Club, and the Girls' Glee Club, and directs the Orpheus Ensemble and Girls' Vocal Ensemble. He has also collaborated with two other faculty members in the recent production of a highly successful operetta.

GORDON A. JOSLIN

Not only does Mr. Joslin teach music at the Heath, Lawrence, and Driscoll schools, but he also has a full curriculum of Glee Club, Band, Orchestra, Harmony II, and Music II at the High School. The fine Band and Orchestra that we have are the results of his many long hours of coaching.

Art Department

MARION W. PARKER

In addition to serving as supervisor of all art work in the Brookline schools, Miss Parker plays an extremely active part in our own school program. She teaches senior art, is a member of the School Council, takes charge of all exhibitions and poster displays, and helps in the activities of the Poster Club, Library Staff, Girls' League, and Dramatic Society.

FAITH J. HALE

No teacher knows more about the history of art than Miss Hale, and she endeavors to provide her pupils with a background in that field while they are learning the fundamentals of drawing. She has exhibited woodwork at Watertown and watercolors at Sudbury and she also teaches art in the Brookline Evening School.

FRANCENIA J. HORN

A member of the School Council, and one of the committee who makes arrangements for Class Day, is Miss Horn of the Art Department. Ready to help in any project, she will always volunteer to have a plentiful supply of decorations made, particularly for the Girls' League and the newly formed Poster Club.

Speech Department

LOUISE M. HANNON

It is justly fitting that the Auditorium Fund has been named after Miss Hannon for the help and encouragement that she has given to students. This year she has been mainly confined to her home, because of illness, but as head of the Speech Department she still takes an executive part in her school work.

URSALA O'HARE BURKE

Taking the place of Miss Hannon this year, Mrs. Burke has complete charge of speech and is faculty adviser of the Debating and the Dramatic Societies. She is also a member of the Professional Women's Club, The Appalachian Mountain Club, The Amateurs of Brookline, and the Cecilia Society, where her singing ability is duly appreciated.

Social Studies

TYLER KEPNER

Mr. Kepner holds the title of Director of Social Studies in the Brookline School System and, as such, plans all work in the social studies. However, he finds time to teach several classes in college preparatory U. S. history and has written several textbooks. Among these is America, now in use in senior history.

M. ROLAND BLANCHARD

Mr. Blanchard is one of the school's most ambitious young men. He is director of the Murivian's business activities, President of the Teachers' Club, and head of the banking program, in addition to being teacher of Economic Education. Stocky and good-natured, Mr. Blanchard has been a prime favorite for many years.

ROSE D. BLISS

To bring an added interest into the studying of history, Miss Bliss collects old newspaper articles and Civil War relics for use in classroom demonstration. In addition, she particularly enjoys traveling about the Nation and considers this as the best way to pursue her other hobby of geology.

FLORENCE E. LEWIS

Although she has been teaching in the High School for only two years since coming from the Devotion School, Miss Florence Lewis has already made a name for herself and has won the respect and affection of all. Those in her geography classes find that subject more than just a list of places in a cumbersome volume.

JANE A. McCABE

Miss McCabe, a teacher of civics at Brookline, is an interesting personality. She numbers among her interest music and literature ,and has collected a fine library. She enjoys travelling, has been to Europe once and has visited the West Coast twice. She is associated with the Girls' League as a faculty adviser.

EDWARD H. MERRILL

If Mr. Merrill is able to cite page and line of the textbook "America," it is because of the hours he spent proof-reading the galley of that well-known product of Mr. Kepner's pen. While United States and European history are the fields Mr. Merrill teaches in the class room, his underlying theme is the function of democracy.

Department

AUGUST C. MILLER, Jr.

We here introduce a history teacher who is an adviser of the Radio Club and a director of the Teachers' Club. Mr. Miller is not only versatile in those fields. but is also a member of the Shailer House Council and one of the Committee that formulates our History curriculum. His reward for such labors—a wife.

FLORENCE G. NASMYTH

Interested in international events of today and in the art and letters of medieval times, Mrs. Nasmyth is a teacher of Modern History and chairman of the Modern History Group, which meets after school-hours to discuss current, foreign, and domestic affairs. She is also a member of the Committee which plans our auditorium periods.

MIRIAM A. NICHOLS

Week-end relaxation by climbing precariously over mountain peaks or skiing down steep slopes, helps to give Miss Nichols the energy to teach a full day of United States History. She is especially interested in Girl Scout work and collaborates with Miss Bruce in arranging meetings and other Scout activities.

WENDELL F. SMITH

Actively engaged in school activities, Mr. Smith, geography and civics teacher, is currently a member of the Scholarship Committee, director of the Dramatic Society's business affairs, and Faculty Adviser to the Stamp Club. He also teaches in the Brookline Evening School. As an author, he has had an article on geography published in the Massachusetts Teacher.

RALPH W. TOTMAN

The Housemaster of Lincoln House is none other than Mr. Totman. co-creator of the novel nomination system used by that house last year. Besides his many duties as Housemaster and member of the House Council, his previous broad law experience has well equipped him for teaching a full program of civics.

GERTRUDE I. WADSWORTH

Miss Wadsworth has many interests besides teaching history. She gardens extensively. and much of her work has been featured at flower shows. She has done welfare work. too, and is an active participant in the Foreign Policy Association. She spends much of her time keeping up with present-day literature.

Social Arts Department

ELVIRA EGLEE POTTER

Those delectable lunches that you hungrily eat at noon are planned for you by Mrs. Potter, head of the Social Arts Department and in complete charge of grammar and high school lunch rooms. All special entertainments and social affairs come under her advisement, and she also takes part in Dramatic and Girls' League activities.

ANNE C. EGAN

The lovely costumes that make class day so colorful are done with a great deal of aid from Miss Egan. She teaches needlework at the High School and is supervisor of Women's class for the Brookline Evening School. In the summer she enjoys traveling and before the weather becomes too hot, plays golf.

ANNIE G. BURNHAM

Many of the girls have gotten to know Miss Burnham this year because she has charge of the sewing and knitting for the Red Cross. She is interested in travel in the United States, collecting odd bits of needlework and is a member of a women's club of Brookline.

MURIEL SOUTH

If, on some afternoon, the pleasant smell of gingerbread drifts your way from the second floor corridor, you will know that Miss South is holding a meeting of either the Girls' or Boys' Foods Club. In the mornings she also teaches courses in Foods, and helps with Lunch room work.

Junior Department

HELEN DAY HEUSNER

There are few in the school who know much about the Junior Department and the work that has been done there for the small group that needs slightly more attention than the average student. Mrs. Heusner is responsible for many of the achievements there, particularly in English work, and as a sideline has received her Ed.M. degree at Harvard.

GILBERT G. MacDONALD

As a basketball coach, Mr. MacDonald, perhaps, has no equal. But when practice is over, he doesn't linger to give advice, but rushes home to see his baby daughter. He teaches in the Junior Department with Mrs. Heusner, and finds his work most interesting.

Administrative Department

BEATRICE FINN

From Brookline school-girl to high school Registrar has been the short career of Miss Finn. She takes care of all the tedious compiling and reference work for the general office, yet still finds time to slip away for an occasional round of golf or a swim in the pool.

MARY C. FINNEGAN

Listed in the Manual of the Public Schools as "Stenographer-Pianist," Miss Finnegan certainly lives up to it in her work in Mr. Hines' office. Her job is taking care of the secretarial work needed in connection with this department of the Brookline schools, and she sometimes plays the piano for the girls' gymnasium periods.

MARION B. HANNAN

Mrs. Hannan, popularly known as Miss Berry to the student body, came to the high school in 1931, and is in charge of Mr. Ringer's office, serving as his personal secretary. Besides the office routine, Miss Berry takes the Headmaster's dictation and attends to all matters pertaining to the faculty, their attendance and payroll.

MIRIAM E. LINSKY

Perhaps Miss Linsky has a greater knowledge of pupil activities and faculty interests than any other person in the High School, for she has custody of the school files and sees that the numerous slips are distributed on time. As attendance secretary, also, she makes out the notices and has charge of the absence lists.

ANNE E. REYNOLDS

Miss Reynolds, former secretary to Mr. Kepner, now finds herself rendering stenographic assistance to heads of departments, housemasters, and others in need of special clerical work. To increase her arduous labors, she is responsible for the cataloging of all guidance material, making such available to interested students.

CAROLINE R. SIEBENS

This year, Mrs. Siebens, our head librarian, has made the library an even more important part of our school life. Because of her tireless endeavor, the gigantic book fair that was put on in the fall became a great success. She is always ready to help students look for information or choose books.

RUTH M. LA POINTE

Perhaps the most tired worker after the fall Book Fair was Miss LaPointe—and well she deserved to be. As Assistant Librarian, she not only carried out her duties about the library but stayed many hours after school to make the Fair a success. This year she also wrote an article for the Conference on School Librarians held at Simmons College.

MARY SCANNELL

Not as well known, perhaps, as other members of the high school staff, Miss Scannell works in the Lunchroom office and does all of the highly detailed accounting necessary to keep the expenditures of the nine Brookline schools from becoming tangled up. She is also Secretary in general for Mrs. Potter and finds bowling an excellent relaxation after a hard day's work.

Murivian Committee

Visit the madhouse in Rooms 239 and 201 to see the Murivian Committee making this 1941 edition possible. Majordomo is Morty Swartz, assisted by the various committee chairmen. Dan Feer, enveloped by the tentacles of the "dummy," is saved by Selma Gordon and Lester Boyce, who coordinate pictures and copy. Lyman Lehrburger, Eric Connolly, Audrey Mischel and Barbara Siegle fan the air with their efforts to "create" words. Statistically minded Edna Morrison and assistant "Pep" Pfeifer sort factual details about the graduates. Charlie Raleigh and Bill Addelson see all pictures first—so they think. Dot Israel concentrates on a new design, and so gets credit for her art work — particularly the cover. Howard Wall and his cartoons have caused you to laugh.

Charlotte Dubinsky and Muriel Nadel have hammered the keyboards to prepare copy.

Sara Seltzer, Harold Bornstein, Stan Feldberg, Jack Chmielinski and Janice Mekelberg have made contributions as junior apprentices.

Dave Small, Lloyd Sanford, and Dick Honthumb, operating at F.16, catch you coming and going. Mr. Williams may take a bow for his ability to coordinate these.

Across the quadrangle one hears sleigh bells—no, it's money! Treasurer Mary Bell directs the process of accounting. Patsy Riley, Isobel Easton, Alice Shinkunas like that jingle too! Barbara Kadetsky and her sales crew of Sumner Gordon, Frank Barrell, Richard Condike, and the versatile Patsy Riley have solicited business until their sales were thin. Ruth Bronstein has illustrated the advertising pages and Ruth Crowley has been responsible for its "dummy." Engravers, printers, photographers and the cover manufacturers all seek a part of what is taken in. Here Mr. Blanchard can take a bow for his ability to direct such activities.

Last Will and Testament

Know all men by these presents, that we, the Class of 1941, of Brookline High School, in the Town of Brookline, in the County of Norfolk, in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, being of sound mind and in full possession of our faculties, excepting Dick Grenier who contracted measles at the time when this document was to be drawn up, do hereby make, ordain, publish, and declare this to be our last will and testament, hereby revoking any and all wills heretofore made by us.

After payment of our debts, just and unjust, and funeral expenses, we devise and bequeath as follows:

First: We leave Miss Sawyer and Mr. Webber our sincere appreciation and gratitude for the friendship and guidance which they have given us in the many years of our high school career.

Second: The goalies on the hockey team leave their nets, as they have been doing all year.

Third: Ken Monteith leaves the lunchroom full of broken hearts, broken dishes, and empty pockets—it says here!

Fourth: Vin Leahy leaves his fine leadership and executive ability to Jack Dreyfuss.

Fifth: Morty Swartz leaves a book titled, "How To Get Good Marks," to Dick Graham with a key to all words over four letters.

Sixth: The Marshal Force leave their posts — the Dogs!

Seventh: Ed Meehan leaves the use of his basketball hands to Dick "Fingers" McLaughlin, who may be able to put them to good use.

Eighth: We leave our formula for the ideal Miss Brookline High 1941. She must have

Lorraine Edgar's hair
Gloria Gould's eyes
Barbara Kadetsky's nose
Budsie Jones' lips
Bev London's complexion
Sally Willis' personality
Evelyn Orde's smile
Norma Coughlin's figure
Amy Cohen's versatility
Helen Bracken's voice and Barbara Ritchie's wholesome popularity.

Ninth: Ed "Superman" Frank leaves his brainchild, the Boys' Club, to B. H. S., hoping it will prove stiff competition for the Girls' League.

Tenth: Our two all-scholastic tackles, Ed Nixon and Jim Feinberg, leave Mr. Downes a box of headache tablets.

Eleventh: Newt Goldman, our ace drummer boy, leaves, still beating, the skins.

Twelfth: Marie Morrison, our contribution to the speech department, leaves her soapbox to start the fires next year.

Thirteenth: We leave Mr. Friedland a new Red Cross seal, and directions on how to feed it.

Fourteenth: John Kiskham leaves Peggy Keith a bag of lollypops so that she may never be without a sucker.

Fifteenth: We leave Dan Rothenberg a brand new shovel!

Sixteenth: We leave our list of favorite songs:

1.	It All Comes Back To Me Now	Cheese Fondue
2.	All Of Me	Peggy Egan
3.	Comin' Thru the Rye	Frank Kelley
4.	In My Merry Oldsmobile	Dick Lawrie

8.	Beat Me, Daddy	Carl Fleming
9.	You Ought To Be In Pictures	Dave Small
10.	Two Dreams Meet	Lyman Lehrburger and Priscilla Cohen

Seventeenth: Eleanor Rice leaves a ton of coal to keep the school warm after she's gone.

Eighteenth: Bob Rowe leaves his sister Barbara, the only Rowe in school without seven seats in it.

Nineteenth: We leave Mr. "Gloomy Gil" MacDonald our congratulations for winding up a successful basketball season with Brookline's first invitation to the Tech Tournament.

Twentieth: We leave F.D.R. still in the White House.

Twenty-first: We leave . . . . .

THE HOUSE PLAN

The House Plan has been developed to provide for the individual student in Brookline High School. The entire school is organized into five groups called Houses, each headed by a House Master. Under this system, all students remain in the same House, with the same home-room teacher and the same fellow-students, until they leave the High School.

One of the advantages of this plan is to offer every student additional opportunities to participate actively in school affairs. House Clubs, numerous service committees, athletic groups, and orchestras provide for the expression of interest and citizenship. Then too, student government, with its House officers, councils, and marshals, gives many opportunities to assume responsibilities and leadership.

Because of the size of Brookline High School, the House Master is particularly helpful in preventing the entering student from being overwhelmed by new experiences. The new student finds in the House Master a sympathetic person who will help him bridge the gap between elementary and secondary school. As he advances, he still continues to receive advice and guidance from his House Master, who understands both the needs of the student and the demands of the school.

The names of the five Houses, Akers, Lincoln, Roberts, Shailer, and Packard, each represent a man who has contributed markedly to the advancement of education in Brookline. Through the years, the ideals of these men have moulded House tradition at Brookline High School.

PACKARD HOUSE

High up in the confines of Brookline High's "pent-house," dwell a small colony of grizzled veterans. They are the survivors of Packard House. Five years ago this group was part of a larger body of about five hundred young lads and lassies, but because of the great toll-taking graduation of 1940, they found their numbers sadly reduced. Led by their gallant Housemaster, Mr. Alfred C. Webber, who has braved the trials and tribulations of four years, this noble group is now about to leave our hallowed halls of learning.

At the beginning of the school year it was necessary to elect officers in order to form a more perfect union, and as a result, Ed Meehan, the dynamic captain of basketball and favorite with the class in general, was chosen to preside. As vice-president, diminutive Ned Moran, all around star athlete and President of the Touchdown Club, was elected. The "Beau Brummel" of Packard House, Joe Grady, and the popular Charlie Taggart were chosen Secretary and Treasurer respectively.

This House contains quite a few more sparkling satellites, such as Ed Nixon, all-scholastic tackle and captain of our football team; Stanton Kelly, marshal floor-captain and co-captain of track; Ed Dillon, athlete extraordinary and Chief Justice of the Court of Justice; Bun Solomon, that go-getting gentleman who possesses a seat in the Court of Justice, as well as in innumerable other organizations; Bill Addelson, president of the Mercureans and a track letter-man; Joanne Woods, a girl of great versatility; and countless others who add their lustre.

Thus has Packard House contributed its share to Brookline High School.

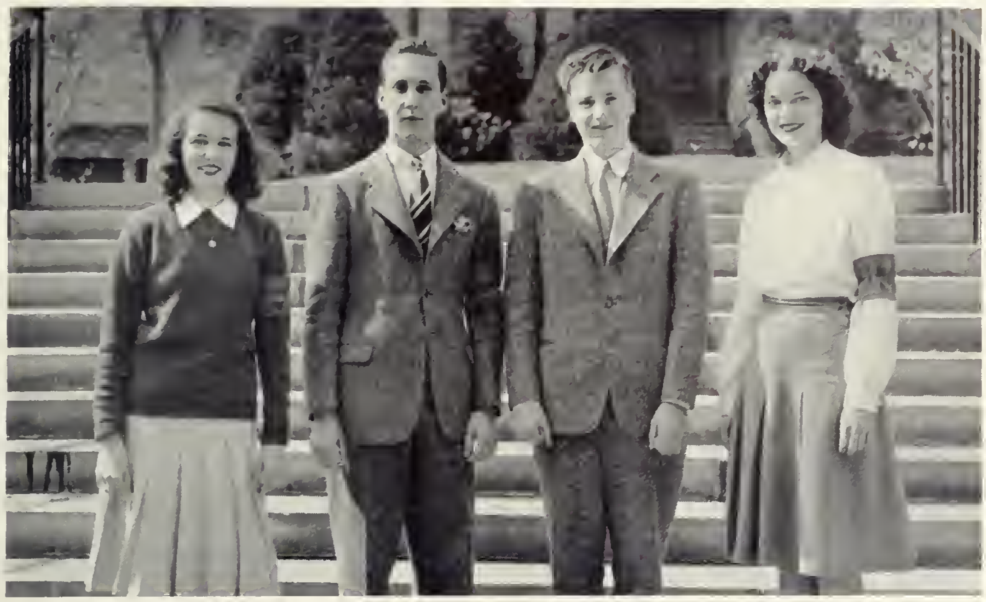
SHAILER HOUSE



SHAILER HOUSE OFFICERS
Beverly London, Secretary; Edwin Frank, President; Vincent Nagle, Treasurer;
Eleanor Rice, Vice-President.

After four years of backbreaking toil, the battle-scarred members of the illustrious Shailer House are nearly ready to end their high school careers. For most of them it was a well spent four years and will serve as an important stepping-stone in their lives.

Stirred on by their tireless leader, Dean of Girls, Miss Mary Sawyer, who took a personal interest in the welfare of each and every one of her charges, these "Shailerites" have lived up to the high standards expected of them. Although some members of the senior class plan to remain for an extra year of education, the majority are of the class of 1941. As is the way in most circles, someone had to preside over this group, so, as a result, Paul Perkins, for the first two years, Vin Leahy for the junior year, and Ed Frank, in the senior year, were chosen. The other three Shailer House officers this past year were that popular young damsel Eleanor Rice as the vice-president. Bev London, as the beautiful scribe, and the quiet, handsome Vin Nagle as the chancellor of the exchequer.

Shailer House is the proud possessor of all four graduating officers, as follows: President, Vin Leahy; vice-president, Herb Ellis; secretary, Marie Morrison; and treasurer, Dorothy O'Hearn.

Among the outstanding members of Shailer House is the aforementioned Vin Leahy, athlete extraordinary, honor student. graduating class president and one of the most popular members of the house; Amy Cohen, president of Alpha Pi. president of the Spanish Club, star athlete and a girl of great versatility; Jim Feinberg, captain of the Marshal force, and all-scholastic guard on

Of course, Shailer House has its share of athletes, among them, star pig-skin toter, Mickey Lally, an all around man of great versatility; Bill Bohn, that iron man of football who was one of Coach Harry Downe's mainstays in the line for the past two years; Dick McLaughlin, hockey player, football end, and a very popular and handsome man in his own right; Rudy Melville, another versatile man, unluckily handicapped by a leg injury most of this past season; Bill Cashen, prominent in school activities, wearer of the red and blue band on his powerful left arm, and also whose activities have already been mentioned. These boys gave a worthy example of our Brookline High School and typified the American youth as he is in a town of this type.

This house contains three members who are nationally known as a result of their participation in the Student's Institute of National Government, meeting in Washington. Toby Berman, the president of the English Club, a brilliant student, and one of the most popular members of the class; Morty Swartz, Editor-in-chief of this beloved Murivian, winner of the Mathematics prize in his Junior year, Student extraordinary, and member of Alpha Pi; and last but not least, big Jim Feinberg.

Shailer also can boast of an enviable membership of twenty-seven in Alpha Pi, led by Amy Cohen and Vin Leahy.

On the Murivian Committee were such notables as Lyman Lehrburger, chairman of the copyright committee, Dan Feer, chairman of the layout committee, Charles Raleigh, chairman of the photography committee, Edna Morrison, chairman of the statistics committee, and innumerable others, representing the cream of the crop.

This year, Shailer was again ably represented by Ed Frank, founder and first president of the Boys' Club, as well as an orator of note, in the coveted J. Murray Kay Prize Speaking. In the field of the feminen drama was Helen Bracken, and others who took minor parts.

On the constantly improving Sagamore Staff, served as editors such outstanding characters as Eldon Scott Cohen, editor-in-chief, Pris Cohen, Lyman Lehrburger, Al Saltzman, George Flashenberg, and Lewis White.

In the Orpheus Ensemble, Dave Small, Charlotte Lampke, and Paul Seamans are regarded in high esteem.

Then too, Lloyd Sanford garnered honors in photography, as president of the camera fiends and Dolly Driscoll is aided by Herb Sandberg and Claude Corty in the interests of science. In the Girls' League, leaders not mentioned are Bev London, Edna Morrison, Helen Wish, and Carol Flarsheim.

Yes, it is indeed very easy to see that the members of Shailer House will make their way into the world as proud graduates of a fine school.

ROBERTS HOUSE OFFICERS

Row 1: Jean Kerwin, secretary. Mr. A. Seamans, Barbara Barry, vice-president. Fred Holton, treasurer; Jack Dreyfuss, president.

ROBERTS HOUSE

In the history of Brookline High School, no house has made a more enviable record in its first three years than has Roberts House. Under the expert guidance of Mr. Albert Seamans, the house and its members have made great strides in all aspects of high school life.

The house officers of this year carried through their duties with efficiency and dignity. This may, in part, be due to their experience in the same capacities last year. Jack Dreyfuss was President; Barbara Barry, Vice-President; Jeanne Kerwin, Secretary; and Fred Holton, Treasurer. As house president Jack represented the house on the School Council, where he was aided by Barbara Barry. Fred Holton, elected by the marshals, joined Jack on the Court of Justice. The house's very efficient marshal force was led by Bob Mealy as floor captain.

The House Council was headed by Jack Dreyfuss in his capacity of president while cooperating with him were the fifteen home room chairmen. Outstanding among their achievements was the extremely satisfactory treasury built-up and the very interesting Roberts House assembly program in May.

The Junior Prom was run by a small committee of house council members: Bob Mealy, Bob Langer, Rosalie McEwan, and Helen Dillon. They in turn appointed other committees to take care of the various prom duties.

Indicative of every house's position in the school is its percentage of students on the honor rolls and although the total was less than last year, Roberts House members secured an extremely enviable record. Bob Langer and Fred Holton were on the First Honor Roll most of the year, and there were many other pupils on the Second Honor Roll who failed to make the highest by securing a "B" in one or two subjects.

It is the ambition of almost every junior to be able to make Alpha Pi. This year Roberts House secured many positions in this honorary group. The following ten students are now wearers of the Alpha Pi insignia: Claire Adelson, Peter Argus, Barbara Hermanson, Fred Holton, Robert Langer, Ruth Peabody, Eugene Rubin, Edna Simons, Phyllis Scheffreen, and Arnold Ulin.

A majority of the performers in this year's thrilling J. Murray Kay Prize Speaking contest were from Roberts House. The remarkable fact about the contest was that a Junior, Arnold Ulin, with his selection from Justice by John Galsworthy carried off the honors from an experienced group. The other six Roberts House competitors were Seymour Lesberg, Adele Sanger, Alan Schein, Esther Waters, Pierrette Mettetal, and Sydelle Singer.

This year's dramatic program included many Roberts House members. In the cast of the three One-Act Plays were Robert Wyner, Elaine Penn, Seymour Lesberg, Jack Dreyfuss, Esther Waters, Phyllis Scheffreen, Alan Schein, Robert Langer, Sydelle Singer, Pierrette Mettetal, and Shirley Gruber. As actors require a Stage Staff, Harold Bornstein was Stage Manager this year and Arnold Ulin headed the electricians.

In the matter of athletics, Roberts House certainly was not behind her activity record. Among those playing B. H. S. football were Peter Argus, John Nason, John McGarry, Barney May, James Ford, Wesley Ba-

The Boys' Club officers prior to the April election were Gerald Gillerman as Secretary and Fred Holton as Treasurer. In the Debating Society, Robert Langer served as Secretary-Treasurer, while Gerald Gillerman was Moderator. Lionel Perlo, President of the Chess Club, was also elected President of a chess league to which our school belongs. In the Spanish Club, Pierrette Mettetal was secretary, while Alan Schein headed an important committee. As is usual for the junior house after mid years it dominated the Sagamore. As may be seen by the foregoing and very impressive but incomplete enumeration, Roberts House is by no means backwards in its participation in extracurricular activities. Its three years' record is one of which it can be justly proud. But this all would be impossible without the ever-present cooperation and guidance of its housemaster. Mr. Seamans, and the homeroom teachers who have made every student's problem their own. Under the direction of these faculty members and with their own desire to go ahead, Roberts House has been preparing for the senior year, the culmination of one's high school career.

LINCOLN HOUSE OFFICERS
Seated: Mr. Totman. Standing: Raymond Barnestone, president, Arthur Quinzani, vice-president. Irving Gould, treasurer.

LINCOLN HOUSE

In the fall of the year 1940, Lincoln House entered its second year at Brookline High School, bringing with it five hundred enthusiastic students, encouraged by their enterprising housemaster, Ralph W. Totman. Mr. Totman has been an inspiration and counsellor to all those desirous of securing his advice.

Serving in his office as president was Raymond Barnstone, capable and energetic leader. During his presidency he proved to be a revolutionist, for he brought about several changes. For example, it will be remembered that the Lincoln House constitution was distributed in printed form to every student in the House. The idea was suggested by Ray, who collaborated with various other individuals in writing and producing an interesting and most informative document.

In the vice-presidency, Arthur Quinzani served very capably and represented the Sophomore Class admirably on the athletic field. He is well known as one of the most promising football players that Brookline High School has for future victorious elevens.

Besides executing the office of secretary, Johnny Cox acquitted himself well on the football field and proved to be a valuable asset to the hockey team.

Since all the class officers mentioned have been on the athletic side, it is hardly necessary to add that Irving Gould, "the man behind the cash books," was another Sophomore playing on the varsity football squad.

Rather than digress from the subject of athletics, let us look further into Sophomore endeavors in this field.

On the Track team two outstanding speedsters,

President Ray Barnstone and Lloyd "Gunga" Dean, showed promise of being potential stars.

On the gridiron, in addition to already mentioned Arthur Quinzani, Irving Gould, and Johnny Cox, there were also two other varsity players chosen, namely Joe Gulley and George Keith. The former promises to live up to and even surpass the ability of his famed brother, Leo, while the latter has already proven himself as the outstanding player from the Sophomore class. However, with spring practice over, there are several other Lincoln House members showing future promise, among them being Lou Sternberg, who from all appearances seems to be future varsity material.

On the tennis courts, Milt Lewis surprised all by running off with the school championship, beating the Senior champion, Fred Holton. In this sport, by the way, Norm Fink claims the distinction of being the only Lincoln House manager of a varsity team. Last, but by no means least, Leo Sutherland and Ken Schneier have shown that next season they probably will figure in the basketball varsity line-up.

No account of a class at Brookline High School would be complete without mention of its marshals. Thus Lincoln House's force was ably captained by Marvin Geller, who will be remembered as the unfortunate lad rejected as lawful representative to the School Council because of a clause in the School Constitution stating that the holder of this office must be of the opposite sex as the president. The office of marshal representative to the Court of Justice was held very capably and efficiently by Bob Abrams and Franklin Garfield.

During the past year, the House Council functioned smoothly. Thus we mean that by dint of hard work, valuable advances were made. In this same House Council there was one individual who might have been called "the man behind the scenes." This person was Alan Goldberg, who worked ceaselessly on the all-important Election Committee.

For the second year in a row, Lincoln House was privileged to make use of the new type of voting machine on trial use by the town officials. This device is being used more extensively in public elections and it is agreed that the members of Lincoln House are being extended a special privilege and honor in being allowed to demonstrate democracy in their own small way by using this method.

The officers for the term of September, 1941 to June, 1942 are as follows: President, Fred Smyth; Vice President, Johnny Cox, who after running by sticker ballot in the Primary won out in the Finals; Secretary, Bob Abrams; Treasurer, Helen McElroy; and Representative to the School Council, Jane Rickwood.

Scholastically speaking, Lincoln House has seen itself garner many positions on the honor rolls. The highest laurels go to Nancy Peabody, Beatrice Bernstein, and Norma Adelson. When members of this House become eligible for membership in Alpha Pi, there is little doubt that many Sophomores will swell the ranks.

This year, not only did Lincoln House enter a goodly proportion of contestants in the annual J. Murray Kay Prize Speaking contest, but it was privileged in seeing Beverly Schlager, a Sophomore, give a superb performance to capture top feminine honors. Other Sophomores whose names could be associated with Dramatics and Prize Speaking were Myron Markell, Jimmy Barnet, Norman Fink, Marilyn Morrill, and Mel Gordon.

In Brookline's most novel musical event Kaarina, Lincoln House was well represented. First and foremost was Gloria Copelman with her very delightful and enchanting singing.

Among Lincoln House's plans for the future is a projected series of afternoon socials to be held in the Girls' League Room and house auditoriums with interesting and famous personalities to be invited to speak to House members on matters of universal interest.

In reviewing the Lincoln House Class of 1943 it must be concluded that this group of students will probably long be remembered after the class graduates and so, as the saying goes, to the members of Lincoln House and Mr. Totman, "More Power to You All!"

AKERS HOUSE

AKERS HOUSE OFFICERS

Row 1: James Noonan, president. Miss Poland, Miriam Haskell, vice-president. Row 2: Gladys Susman, secretary. James Leslie, treasurer. Barbara Norris, representative to school council.

With September of 1940 came a horde of bewildered-looking creatures into the halls of Brookline High School. These lost souls made up the freshman class known as Akers House. But, with the passage of but one short year, an efficient group of students is encountered. As a phenomenon this transformation is old business, but the actual practice of such a change takes place but once in a scholar's career. The gap between the gawky, starry-eyed freshman of the fall and the sophisticated know-all, see-all, hear-all freshman of the spring is tremendous. However, all's well that ends well, so here is Akers House as it stands today.

Akers House was named for Mr. Winfred C. Akers, for seventeen years the beloved headmaster of Brookline High. The position of housemaster for a body which honors such a versatile man is, indeed, a difficult job. Akers House is proud to have Miss Emma Poland in this capacity. Her intelligent understanding and sympathy have been as a balm to the troubled soul of many a freshman. Her driving energy has been an inspiration to all with whom she has come in contact and through the high school years they will enjoy going to her with any sorrows or joys which come within their sphere.

Brookline High School's scope of activities is varied in character and content and Akers House has plunged right into extra-curricular business.

Although there are not many varsity teams toward which girls may aim, the freshman girls have done well in their athletic endeavors. Alice Aeschliman and Maria Sisk made the second hockey team; Marion Tofias and

The masculine body of Akers House has been busily engaged in football, track, swimming, golf and hockey. Don Bernstein was the only freshman boy to receive his varsity letter in swimming and has shown himself very proficient in aquatic sports. Although the basketball season was unsuccessful from the victory standpoint, many stars were discovered. Among these, on the freshman squad were J. Avard, B. Epstein, W. Farnsworth, R. Fechtor, M. and the freshmen were out in force. With such a favorable start, the members of Akers House should forge ahead to be better sportsmen and women.

For those more interested in the intellectual side of life. the School offers many opportunities. The Debating Society Room became the hang-out of more than one freshman. The life of a newspaper man or woman is notably portrayed in the Sagamore Room, where an assignment seems to be the one desire in a reporter's mind. As the Speech Department takes on more freshmen, so the Dramatic Society sends forth a welcome call. Prize-speaking is always one of the year's highlights, and, although no freshmen were on the program this year, next season should bring forth a goodly representation. For a musical interlude the Akers House Band, Orchestra, and Glee Club are commendable or-

Norris, representative to the school council. Five different personalities, but when they get busy, things begin to happen. The Akers House Council, made up of the chairmen of each home-room, is worthy of recognition. This group has planned and carried through many successful enterprises and, as a representative cross-section, the Council presents a true picture of the varied House's personalities.

The marshal force is chosen by ballot from among the students of the freshman class. The floor captain and representative to the Court of Justice elected from the marshal force were Frank O'Hearn and Jim Leslie, respectively. The followers of this worthy captain were Alan Alpern, Albert Feldman, Myron Sharaf, Bob Mulvey, Charles Cook, Blake Potter, Verne Edmunds, Mel Gordon, James Noonan, Miriam Haskell, Eleanor McCaffrey, Mary Raftery, Mary Wallace, Roberta Rosenfield, and Gladys Susman.

The chief purpose and aim of Akers House as a unit of Brookline High was to maintain and further the standards of this school. Thus they are very grateful for the opportunity to participate in so many diversified activities, and will try to be worthy of the trust placed in them.

NATIONAL DEFENSE TRAINING

Sometime last December, within a group consisting of the School's administrative leaders, an idea was born. They were concerned with present day conditions and the future employment of mechanically-minded boys. With the cooperation of Mr. Bridgham and Mr. Edmunds, a 480 hour training course was designed to suit the needs of these boys and to put them on an equal basis with more experienced and older groups.

The plan provided that the training group drop their subjects other than History and English, and replace them with three and one-fourth hours of shop-training work. Its success is due to the fact that "The boys are cooperating, and responding favorably."

JUNIOR DEPARTMENT

The Junior Department of Brookline High School's aims are to enable all members to secure a grammar school diploma and to bridge the gap between elementary and secondary school. This is secured by providing individual training at the student's own rate of study in the basic subjects of English, social studies, science, and mathematics. In addition, the students often take regular freshman courses and remedial reading is greatly emphasized. The work that Mrs. Heusner and Mr. MacDonald are doing with this group bears its rewards as the Juniors advance to full high school standing. Thus the Junior Department is an integral portion of the School.

Although handicapped by injuries and losses of star players through graduation, Brookline's football team finished in second place in the final class B rating.

The team was coached by Harry Downes and John Grinnell, and was captained by All-Scholastic Eddie Nixon, one of the best schoolboy tackles in the state.

Peter Argus, John Nason, Jim Hewitt, George Melville, and Dick McLaughlin composed the ends on the squad. The tackles were: Captain Ed Nixon, Gil Dixon, Jim Feinberg, Ken Krause, and Eddie Dillon. Bill Bohn, Barney May, Wes Baker, Joe Duffy, Bob Rowe, Dick Coradeschi, and Dan Bassist made up the guards. For the center berth there was hot competition all year between Joe Gulley, Bob Mealy, and John McGarry, with each playing a goodly share. Jim Ford, also out for center, received a broken ankle in the first game and was out all season. The star-studded Brookline backfield was composed mostly of seniors. Frank Kelley, Jim Love, Jimmy Connolly, Vin Leahy, Eddie Bagley, Ed Meehan, Bill Cashen, Mickey Lally, and Ned Moran all contributed to the success of the team in their last year as Red and Blue gridsters. Among the underclassmen who did very well are George Keith, John Cox, and Fred Carriero.

On September 21 the team journeyed down to Winthrop and defeated the home team to the tune of 14-0, the touchdown being made by the Kelleys, Stan and Frank. The following week the Granite City boys came up to Tech Field to take a 7-0 beating at the hands of the Downesmen as Stan Kelley skirted his end to score. The third game on the schedule was with Watertown and ended, after forty minutes of dog-eat-dog football, in a Watertown victory, 10-0. The Downesmen bounced right back the following week and whipped Boston Latin.

7-0, with Dick McLaughlin scoring. Unbeaten Weymouth rolled onto the Brookline field the following week and rolled off again still undefeated, as they won, 14-0. In the sixth game of the season, against Framingham, it was the magic toe of Captain Ed Nixon, combined with a touchdown drive by Frank Kelley, which provided the 7-6 victory margin. A great touchdown by the comparatively unknown Mickey Lally gave the Downesmen a well earned victory over Fitchburg on November 2. The following week the Brookline team went into Belmont and came out with a 14-6 victory. Frank Kelley and Babe Argus did the scoring.

With a record of six victories and two defeats, Harry Downes and the team members began to prepare for "the" game of the year against their traditional Newton rivals. When the day arrived, the Newton gridiron was practically a sheet of ice. A great touchdown run by Eddie Bagley and Frank Kelley's cut-back romp provided the necessary victory margin, and culminated another great season for Harry Downes and the Brookline High School football team.

The Touchdown Club, under the guidance of Coach Downes, swung into its third year of activity with the election of its officers. Edward Moran was made President, with Frank Kelley as Vice-President. The treasury was capably handled by Ed Nixon, while Joe Gulley took care of the secretarial duties. During the year, such men as Leroy "Pat" Hanley, the head coach of Boston University, the motion pictures of the Boston College-Tennessee Sugar Bowl classic, and Frank Leahy, formerly of Boston College, now head coach at Notre Dame, were some of the featured attractions.

A decisive $46\frac{1}{3}$ to $20\frac{2}{3}$ victory over the Lynn English High School team turned a rather mediocre track campaign into a fairly successful one for Coach E. Montgomery Wells and his Red and Blue spike-ulators.

In December, track suits and equipment were issued and Coach Monty Wells, along with his co-captains Lawrence Hickey and Stanton Kelley, was set to get the 1940-1941 campaign underway. Some fifty boys answered the call for team positions, and of this group probably the three most outstanding were Fred Carreiro, Paul Seamans, and Charley Johnson. Carriero did the point-getting at two of the three big interscholastic meets, namely the Northeastern meet in which he tied for third place in the high jump, and the State Meet in which he tied for fourth place. Young Charley Johnson tied the school record for the thirty-five yard dash.

Paul Seamans won the annual septathlon (seven track and field events) by piling up a total of 4,243 points, and he was a consistent point-getter throughout the campaign.

In a novice meet, against Malden, Carreiro and Seamans got three points apiece. The second meet was another defeat, this time by Newton by a score of 45 to 28. Charley Johnson with $6\frac{1}{4}$ points was the high Brookline scorer of the day.

Next on the Red and Blue schedule was the big Northeastern Interscholastic Meet where Fred Carriero, in the high jump event, got the only Brookline points.

The Brookline tracksters tasted victory for the first time against Milton High by a score of $38\frac{2}{3}$ to $29\frac{1}{3}$. Paul Seamans and Al Barkin, with $6\frac{1}{4}$ points apiece, were the high scorers.

Right on the heels of this victory, the Wealthy Towners went on to whip Lynn English by a $25\frac{2}{3}$ point margin. Co-captain Hickey in the shot put, Charley Johnson in the dash, and Paul Seamans in the 300 yard run and the relay, took the individual scoring honors.

The annual State Meet held at the Boston Garden was the last contest on the Brookline schedule. The only Brookline man to place was Fred Carreiro who took third in the high jump event.

Discounting the two interscholastic meets, the Wellsmen had, at the close of the campaign, a win-loss record of two and two.

Along with co-captains Larry Hickey and Stan Kelley, and afore-mentioned Fred Carreiro, Paul Seamans, and Charley Johnson, there were others who definitely aided the track team. Dashmen Joe Duffy, Ray Barnstone, Dave Segool, Billy Addelson, Al Barkin, Gerry Kafker, and Lou Pearlstein took a goodly share of points.

Vin Nagle performed well in the shot putting division. The same was true of Paul Sperling in the broad jump event, and Floyd Dean in the one thousand yard run. Bob Byer, Pete Lalooses, and Bob Lind formed the remainder of the squad.

As the Murivian went to press, Mr. Bates announced the startling news that Coach Wells unfortunately was compelled to resign as the leader of Brookline's tracksters. Mr. Wells has guided his athletes through many successful seasons in the past, but is forced to turn over his coaching duties to Mr. Bates.

Mr. Bates also presented the revised spring track schedule, consisting of individual meets with Milton, Lynn English, Waltham, and Newton; and the State meet and Fitchburg Relays. At the same time, the freshman listings included several competitions.

Many of this year's team showed promise of being the stars of next year's track team.

Of the hockey team it may be said that with graduation (in 1940) went the championship, for the 1941 edition of the Red and Blue puck-chasers sorely lacked scoring ability and punch.

With the veterans, Captain Hank Connolly, Eddie Dillon and Dick McLaughlin as a nucleus, Coach Harold N. Bates attempted to mold the rest of the squad from such bright prospects as John Mulvihill, Ned Moran, Jack Craven, Joe Gulley, Frank O'Hare, John Cox, Mickey Lally, Johnnie Egan, Bill Kickham, Chris Hackett, Tom Kirby, Bob Delano, Johnnie Nason, Bob Ryan, and goalies Vin Leahy and Jack Daley.

When the Batesmen opened with a victory over Natick by a three to one score, Brookline hopes were high that possibly this year's unit wouldn't have to start from the bottom and rebuild. But the team hit a losing streak started by Hudson and Somerville, with a 4-0 and a 4-2 victory, respectively.

The fourth game of the campaign found the Wealthy Towners on the losing end of a close 2-1 decision against Malden High. This was followed by a 6-2 defeat at the hands of the "Minute-men" from Lexington. Still unable to shake the losing jinx, the Brookline sextet was beaten the following week by Brockton. A 0-0 tie with Dedham and a 2-1 loss to Natick were the results of the seventh and eighth games.

The following contest was truly a moral victory. For twenty-seven minutes the Batesmen battled the Eastern Massachusetts champions, Hudson, to a 0-0 tie. In the final game of the season, Somerville for the second time triumphed.

Thus ended a rather unfortunate hockey season for Brookline High School. The campaign was not without its brighter side, however, for most of this year's squad will return next year.

Basketball

The 1940-1941 basketball season was one of crowning achievement for head coach Gilbert MacDonald and his Red and Blue basketeers. The hard work of Mr. MacDonald's two previous seasons was rewarded by the production of a team which, by winning twelve and losing only five scheduled games, advanced into the famous Tech Tournament where they suffered a hard-fought defeat from Chelsea, 42-24.

The Varsity squad consisted of twelve men divided into two teams. Captain Eddie Meehan, Joe Mahoney, Babe Argus, Peter Young, Ed Nixon, and Charley Mooney formed the first squad. Captain Meehan was a tireless competitor and earned a goodly share of points throughout the campaign, while the other senior member of the team, big Ed Nixon, also added to the success of the team. Joe Mahoney, Peter Young, Babe Argus, and Charley Mooney, who scored twenty-five points in the Newton game, rounded out the rest of the squad. The success of this year's team may be traced to the close co-operation and steady all around play these six boys, who all had their share in scoring. Mooney led with 112, then came Young with 98, Meehan with 91, Mahoney with 76, and Nixon with 62. Argus scored 33, although handicapped by a bad ankle.

The second varsity team consisted of Julie Cohen, Billy Connolly, Johnny Flessas, George Keith, Johnny Pignato, and Mark Raverby.

In addition to the regular Surburban League teams of Rindge Technical, Arlington, Newton, and Cambridge, three other teams, Quincy, Belmont, and Huntington were added to the Brookline schedule.

In winning these games, the MacDonaldmen rolled up an impressive total of five hundred and five points.

Since ten of the twelve members of this year's first squad will be available in 1941-1942, the Brookline High School basketball picture is a bright one indeed.

Swimming

SWIMMING TEAM

Row 1: Giteleman. Clifford. Grojean. Bernstein. Walsh, Schutzer. Row 2: Kapstein, Russell. Bullard. Hyman, Langer, Muir, Mr. Coutts.

The Brookline High School swimming team of 1940-1941 was hardly as successful as some of its predecessors. However, when one considers the schedule which the boys had to swim against, the campaign could hardly be called disastrous.

Coach John Coutts formed a squad of eighteen members from some thirty-five candidates who answered the call for new talent. This squad was made up of five seniors. Captain Dick Grojean. Bert Gietleman. Eric Hyman, Bob Rowe, and Robert Mann; four juniors, Stanley Muir. a consistent point getter. Bob Langer. Terry Clifford. and George Diamond. The three sophomore members were Lou Harding. Justin Walsh. and Jack Russell, the freshman sensation of 1939-1940. The freshmen class placed six swimmers, Don Bernstein, Walter Bullard. Don Purcell. Maurice Rosenthal. Bob Fogg, and Stan Rosenthal. on the squad.

The Red and Blue natators faced such stiff competition as the Brown University freshmen, the Harvard freshmen, Brockton, Worcester Academy, Dean Academy, and Massachusetts Institute of Technology. The Couttsmen scored their only victories against Brockton and Dean Academy. but found the college squads too well balanced for an inexperienced team. In the big meet of the year, the Interscholastic Championships or Meehan Meet, Brookline's natators placed third and so finished strongly for the relatively unsuccessful season of 1940-1941.

The managers this year were Eliot Kapstein, Lauri Shutzer, Vin Willauer, and Dave Skarvisrski, while the divers were greatly aided by the coaching advice of Earl Ennis.

Coach Coutts, himself a former Brookline High swimming luminary, feels rather optimistic about next year's team. since graduation will only take five members from this year's squad of eighteen mermen. Thus there will be a nucleus of finished swimmers upon which to build next year's hopes.

Baseball was another one of the Brookline High School sports hit extremely hard by the 1940 graduation. With such luminaries as Joe Sutherland, Ed Riley, Bob Jacobs, Duke Mason, Leo Gulley, Jim Kelly, and Babe Driscoll no longer in the fold, coach Tom Fitzgerald and Captain Eddie Bagley faced the gargantuan task of rebuilding the team. Such returning veterans as first sacker Hal Silverman, pitchers Frank Kelley and Frank Levine, catcher Ed Nixon, and second basemen Jim Love and Ned Moran made the picture look a little less dreary for a successful nine.

Last year's junior varsity squad, always a prep group for the first string, contributed some fifteen members to the varsity cause. These boys included such standouts as the versatile Pete Argus and Ed Meehan, portsider Charley Edgar, who had plenty on the ball, Billy Connolly, Joe Mahoney, Bob Delano, Frank Fregoe, Mark Raverby, Hal Brown, and Bob Rowe.

Herb Lynn and George Keith were the outstanding members of last year's freshman team, by virtue of their making this season's Varsity squad. John Mulvihill, Lou Pearlstein, Parker Cooper, and Bill Burton were among those out for the varsity for the first time and who found a place on the team.

Among this year's leading exponents of the horsehide and willow, were Eddie Bagley, the hot corner guardian, shortstop Bob Delano, first baseman Hal Silverman, and pitchers Cooper, Edgar, Levine, and Frank Kelley.

The stress this year was laid on the idea of building for the future, and coach Tom Fitzgerald made every possible effort to work in the sophomore and junior members of the squad in order to give them experience and training.

BOYS' TENNIS TEAM
Row 1: Geller, Rabinovitz, Sternberg, Freedman, Sharaf. Row 2: Mr. Barnes, Stubbs (Asst. Mgr.), White, Goldstein, Holton, Sacknoff, Craven, Shanley, Perlo, Fink (Mgr.).

"The 1940 graduation took with it one of the best tennis teams which Brookline High School has had in recent years," declared coach Donivan A. Barnes, as we began our Murivian interview. The mentor went on to state, "That team, with two such stars as Bob Kaplan, winner of last summer's Southern Division championship sponsored by the United States Lawn Tennis Association, and Bob Feinberg, who is now at the University of North Carolina on a tennis scholarship, was good enough to win nine out of ten matches, and finish fourth out of forty-three in the Massachusetts Interscholastic Tournament."

The big problem which the genial coach faced this year was the rebuilding and developing of an entirely new team. To aid him in this task, some fifteen candidates reported this spring for places on the Varsity. Among them were Howie Leventhal, Gerry Gillerman, Lionel Perlo, Les Sacknoff, Harry Goldstein, Louis Sternberg, Lew White, Mickey Geller, Bert Rabinovitz, Howie Freedman, Fred Holton, Mike Sharaf, Steve Shanley, and Jack Craven; the last named four were the highest rated in the Spring Playoffs. Jack is the 1941 captain.

This fall saw the playing of the ninth annual Fall Tournament. This big event, which takes place during the first two weeks of school, is the brainchild of Coach Barnes. It serves as an important means of deciding who the members of the team will be and was won this year by Fred Holton over Harry Goldstein, both juniors.

The schedule this year, contained one more match than last year's and included Roxbury Memorial, Dorchester, Boston Latin, Needham, Quincy, Haverhill, Malden, Medford, Wellesley, and Newton. Wellesley is the newcomer on this year's list.

The managers assisting Coach Barnes and the raqueteers were Norm Fink and Philip Stubbs.

Golf

Under the direction of coach Harry Brown and captained by Martin "Mickey" Lally, the 1941 Brookline High School golf team marched through another campaign which compared favorably with that of its predecessors.

The squad was made up of such embryonic Sarazens, Joneses, and Sneads as jolting Johnnie McGarry, a junior, who packed plenty of distance into every drive, and was efficient in the other departments as well; Frank O'Hare, another junior, who played a steady and consistent game all season. Next year's captaincy will undoubtedly go to one of these boys. Sophomores Billy Smith and Jim Carolan contributed immeasurably to the successful campaign. Smith was steady and consistent in every department, and Carolan had, along with his trapshooting skill, a long drive.

Three freshmen, BobM ay, "Jughead" Ernst, and Bill Murphy, battled it out for the coveted spot of number six man on the squad. Murphy won the high school championship in the Autumnal match last September. Ernst was the runner up in this match. May was always a dangerous and tough opponent. All three of these boys will be important cogs in future high school golf teams.

April brought with it some very favorable golf weather and the "Brown bombers" quickly took advantage of it. On practically any afternoon in the week Johnnie McGarry, Bill Smith, along with Bob May and Bill Murphy could be seen blasting their way around the "Muni" golf course with score cards showing such results as 69's, 72's and higher. (Note: We only saw the score cards, not the actual playing.)

This year's schedule included such capable teams as Belmont, Arlington, Watertown, Lexington, Newton, and Waltham.

Once thought of as an old man's game, golf, as these boys are yearly proving, is an excellent and vigorous out-of-door sport.

The possessors of the coveted varsity "B"s for boys' athletic achievement are always noted by the student body, but this year the Murivian is supplementing this by an explanation.

This insignia is awarded in all recognized sports to those boys deemed worthy by the respective head coach. Winners in major sports receive red "B"s; in minor, blue ones. Although at one time such an award required a specified amount of participation, today letters may be given to boys who have shown certain desirable qualities.

The Old English "B" awarded to girls by the Physical Education Department is a symbol of outstanding interest in the field of girls' sports. It does not necessarily stand for excellence in athletics, but represents a required number of five hundred points received by the girls during their school career. These points are obtained by regular attendance at afternoon sports and by holding the post of locker marshal in the gymnasium. There is only a small group every year which is able to obtain this letter and, because of this, the Old English "B" has come to be regarded as honorary award.

ORGANIZATIONS

The executive branch and principal body of Brookline's student government is represented by the School Council. The Council's function is to regulate student activities, working with the headmaster on the varied problems presented each year. Specifically, they do the routine work of approving house elections and calling Marshal elections, while this year they surveyed all organization activities, reviewed applications for club charters, and considered attempts to promote new activities. A primary aim of the Council is to see each club receive a charter.

The membership of this executive group is composed of the five house presidents, five members of the opposite sex, from the respective houses, the captain of marshals, and five teachers from the various houses. This year saw Ed Meehan as Council president, assisted by Joanne Woods from Packard House, Ed Frank and Helen Bracken from Shailer House, Jack Dreyfuss and Barbara Barry from Lincoln House, Ray Barnstone and Jane Rickwood from Roberts House, and James Noonan and Barbara Norris from Akers House. The captain of marshals was James Feinberg and the faculty members were Mr. Shepard, Mr. Wilkinson, Miss Ricker, Mr. Cooper, and Mr. Gould.

Composed of the leaders of all five houses, the Marshal Force has exerted an immense influence on the school. In addition to patrolling the corridors between periods, they are responsible for maintaining a clean lunch room and assisting at all important school functions. Thus, they serve as ushers at Dramatics, Prize Speaking, and at graduation. In short, they represent the law enforcing branch of Brookline's student government.

Marshals are elected directly from the homeroom, each room contributing two students, but each year a limited number of marshals at-large are also appointed. The only two qualifications for membership are that future wearers of the red and blue bands possess at least a "C" average in their studies, and are considered as good "citizens" of the High School.

Each house has a floor captain responsible for those members in his house. These captains are Marvin Geller, Lincoln; Robert Langer, Roberts; Toby Berman, Shailer; and Stanton Kelly, Packard. This year's captain of marshals is Jim Feinberg. He is the head of all the floor captains, and thus is in charge of all executive activities. Assistant captain of marshals is Beverly London, while the supervising faculty member is Mr. Harold Bates.

In every well trained organization the occasional need for an administrative body supervising law and order arises, a body which can constructively right the inevitable wrongs which sometimes creep into the best of school bodies. At Brookline High School this department is more than adequately known as the Court of Justice.

Comprised of a faculty adviser and students popularly elected, the duties of this organization consist of meting out justice to erring students.

The court is run much as a public courthouse. The defendant is provided with an attorney for defense, and the prosecuting attorney of the court prosecutes the case. The jurors consist of the students who judge the case according to their own opinions and prescribe suitable punishment or acquittal. This year's Chief Justice is Edward Dillon of Packard House, while Bernard Solomon and Edward Meehan represent Packard House. Shailer House is ably represented by Vincent Leahy, James Feinberg, David Small, and Edwin Frank, while Roberts House boasts Jack Dreyfuss and Fred Holton as members. From Lincoln House come Raymond Barnstone and Frank Garfield. Aided by Mr. Roman, faculty adviser, the court has abided by the highest ideals of law and order for the year 1941.

Bank Day Tomorrow—Bank Day Today. This strictly student activity takes place twice a month in the early morning home-room period, and is designed to sponsor saving, not only for today but also for tomorrow.

This year has been characterized by an upward swing of 6% in the banking average and an enrollment of over 50% of the students. The aim of the school bank is to increase the number of depositors and to lower the average deposit of one dollar per bank day.

The bank is run under the supervision of Mr. Blanchard, assisted this year by Ed Frank and Helen Bracken. In charge of the various houses are Ruth Wecker, Akers; Richard Gilbert, Lincoln; Barbara Alpern, Robers; Betty Simons, Shailer. The rest of the staff is composed of Charles Raleigh, Margaret McElroy, Janice Saklad, Ruth Clayton, Ruth Birmingham, Betty Ann Orlov, Alan Tichnor, Peter Powers, Isabel Sharenson, Lester Boyce, Calman Estrach, Bernice Diamond, Robert Epstein, and Marvin Gellar.

As a statistical record it is interesting to note that rooms 102, 307, 203, 239, 310, 210, and 213 were leaders in the percent of depositors.

The Alpha Pi Society is the school's most exclusive organization. Admitting only the upper-classmen to its ranks, the Society this year includes the School's outstanding thirty-eight.

Alpha and Pi are two Greek words signifying leadership and excellence, respectively. With these high standards in mind, the admission requirements consist of a minimum total of eight points. At least three points must be secured through leadership in extra-curricular activities and three others by excellence in academic work.

Twice a year the Society convenes to admit new members and discuss pertinent business. The future wearers of the Alpha Pi insignia are then publicly initiated into the honorary society and pledge their allegiance to the Society.

The Honorary Society has a long and untarnished record established over a quarter century of existence. Its success from the time of its inauguration by W. Barton Leach, was in a great part due to the direction of Mr. William Snow. Alpha Pi is now progressing steadily under the direction of Miss Jane Perkins. The officers this year were Amy Cohen, president and Vincent Leahy, secretary-treasurer. These officers were chosen by virtue of having the two highest total number of credits.

"Give to the Red Cross" was this year answered with more money and more enthusiasm than ever before. Students sported their red and white pins with pride, and those who had delayed in giving their contribution to their home room representatives were generally reminded to do so by their fellow classmates.

Best contributor, perhaps, was Mr. Friedland whose tireless work as faculty adviser has helped place the high school on a one hundred percent (100%) basis and has given Brookline a reputation high among the leaders of the Boston Metropolitan Chapter. Ably aiding him were President Herbert Ellis, and Eugene Rubin, Vice-President; Vincent Nagle, whose job as Treasurer of the funds is certainly not an easy one; and Barbara Hermanson, Recording Secretary.

Although the Treasurer and Secretary are elected by popular vote, the Vice-President is chosen by a school-wide essay contest and automatically becomes President in the next year. Thus only those with the best knowledge and interest in the Red Cross are chosen to lead the group.

Certainly Brookline High School's Red Cross has had the solid support of every teacher and pupil since 1925 when the drive first started and certainly, it well lives up to the motto "I serve."

There is no other organization that does more for the high school than the Girls' League. The primary spirits behind the work done are Miss Sawyer and Miss Poland. The girls themselves work energetically to complete Christmas goods for the needy, to care for the Lost and Found Department, and to see that no girl in the high school is neglected. The Senior and Junior Advisers, headed this year by Beverly London, help the Freshmen become adjusted to their routines, and the Advisory Council, chairmaned by Edna Morrison, takes care of Girls' League affairs. Outstanding was Carol Flarsheim's Vocational Talks committee, which presented six programs.

Biggest meeting of the year was the Supper Party, at which time the retiring officers: President, Jane Driscoll; Vice President, Shirley Applebaum; Treasurer, Ruth Peabody; and Secretary, Jean Miller; turned over the reigns of leadership. With the customary ceremony of lighting candles, Jeanne Schienfeldt as President, Nancy Peabody as Vice president, Barbara Hermanson as Treasurer, and Edna Simons as Secretary, pledged to maintain the lofty tradition of the League.

The year closed with the new and old League leaders collaborating on the Eighth Grade Party, when the future high schoolers are introduced to Brookline High.

The Boys' Club is the result of demands by the students for a boys' organization to offer activities for those who could not attain varsity positions. Originally planned only as a means of improving the inter-school relations of Brookline's boys, through the medium of athletic contests, bowling leagues, and the like, the club has brought benefits to the entire school. This year, for example, it promoted the operetta, Kaarina, the profits of which were given to the band for the purchase of uniforms. Then, too, its two hundred or more members have also been of service in countless other ways.

After several vain attempts to put the idea of a boys' club into practice, Edwin Frank organized a group which, under his guidance, successfully produced the present arrangement of specified meetings, with speakers, several times a year, and small get-togethers more often. Its success has been due in no small measure to its senior faculty advisor, Mr. Arthur Flemings, who helped President Frank put theories into practice. Also assisting the club, are Mr. Chester Seamans, Mr. Albert Seamans, and Mr. Friedland.

The Girl Scout troop of Brookline consisted of two groups. Miss Nichols, Captain of the troop, led the group seeking first class rank in its required duties, while Miss Bruce, troop lieutenant, strove to teach the obligations of a second class scout. The organization enlisted some twenty members in 1941 who enjoyed this activity wholeheartedly, for the feeling of service was uppermost. This was shown by the setting aside of one meeting each month for Red Cross service work. With Miss Egan and Miss Burnham of the Social Arts Department cooperating, many serviceable articles were made.

The B.H.S. Mariner Ship Westward Ho had a nautical season beginning in the fall with a canoe trip along the Charles River, and followed by an overnight land cruise to Cape Cod. Beginning winter duty, officers were chosen as follows: Skipper, Miss Poland; First Mate, Miss Allen; Second Mate, Jean Miller; Super Cargo, Virginia Pearson; and Bos'ns, Amy Cohen and Dorothy Driscoll. New members were initiated and Yeoman Alice Aeschleman was elected. The winter was spent in gaining Marine knowledge and journeying to the Scout Commissioner's. A Red Cross first aid course taken under the guidance of Mrs. Cleary, and sailing completed the year.

El Circulo Espanol has found this year that much is to be learned about Spanish folk-lore and customs by observing Mexico. Mr. Wilkinson graciously consented to attend an early meeting. and gave a detailed talk on his trip to Mexico. while the Christmas meeting was done with a flavor of pinatas and villancicos (carols) prevailing.

An innovation in the regular meetings was the talk that club member Lloyd Sanford presented on photography. His slides that he showed proved of great interest to the club.

The group. which is ever increasing, is headed by Amy Cohen. with Pierette Mettetat as Vice-President. Olga Naranjo holds the job of Secretary, (and a job it is too, writing of reports and reading them in Spanish). while Dick Coradeschi attends to the funds. Miss Wood and Miss Placido are always presenting word games for the group's enjoyment. and introducing many old customs to give the members a greater appreciation of the Spanish language.

Biggest get-together of each year is the Annual Picnic to Cedar Hill. There the club cooks its own supper. while entertainment for many of its members, and round off the evening singing old Spanish songs.

"Bonjour mes amis." This friendly introduction would indicate to B. H. S. students that President Ruth Hoffman was opening another meeting of Le Cercle Francais. Originated to offer students of French a means of appreciating the French language and culture, and also giving them an opportunity to both hear and speak it. the group meets once a month to see French plays. sing French songs. and participate in word games. Membership is open to all seniors who are passing. sophomores and juniors who attained at least a grade of "B" for their first month's work, and freshmen whose grade has been "A." No English is permitted during the meetings and as a result. Jeanne Scheinfeld and Clande Corty were chosen this year to attempt to keep everyone fluently conversing. Other officers for the year are, Robert Langer, Vice-President; Henry Hacker. Secretary: Isabel Sharenson. Treasurer: Barbara Alpern, Program Chairman: Evelyn Gorfinkel. Refreshment Chairman. and Fred Holton. publicity Chairman.

The hard work of Miss Perrin as faculty adviser and of all the teachers in the French Department. has made this club one of the largest and the most interesting in the High School.

With the knowledge of the German language becoming increasingly important today, the German Club finds itself assuming a position of greater importance in the school. Aiming chiefly to give the student a better understanding of the language and a practical application of the German that he has learned, the organization meets five or six times a year. Mr. Friedland gives the group much interesting information about Germany, and as faculty adviser sees to it that every member expresses himself in his adopted language at meetings.

Paul Seamans is this year's President, Alvan Sterling is Vice-President. Sally Reichert is Secretary, and Anita Konikow is Treasurer. An Entertainment Committee has been appointed. headed by Herbert Cooks and Mary Conroy. and the Publicity Committee is taken care of by Frieda Omansky.

The several guest speakers have helped to give an interesting picture of different modes of German life. and motion pictures have proved most entertaining for the members. Biggest meeting of the year was the joint get-together with the German Club of Newton High School in the spring.

There is no better manner in which to obtain training for newspaper work than to join the Sagamore staff.

This year's editor-in-chief was Eldon Scott Cohen, whose column "Scott Comments" was a regular feature. The staff was reorganized this fall to leave one managing editor, Lyman "Ricki" Lehrburger, whose job it was to work late on Tuesdays to make "dummies," and a news editor, Lewis White. The feature side of the news was supervised by the staff poetess, Priscilla Cohen, while the magazine was made-up by Nancy Williams. Eric Connelly served as sports editor, and the rewrite editors were Claire Adelson, Elaine Smithers, Emmanuel Abrams. There were also photographers Matty Stern and Lloyd Sanford and artists, Boris Schnoll and Bob Leventhal.

The business staff included Al Saltzman, advertising manager, with Jeanne Scheinfeldt and Virginia Berman as assistants; and George Flashenberg, circulation manager, with Betty Simons and Gilda Berman assisting. Evert Lind and Alice Shinkunas were treasurer and bookkeeper, respectively.

All due credit must be given to faculty advisers, Miss Deal, on the editorial side, and Mr. Ehnes and Mr. Shepard, on the business staff. Under Mr. Ehnes's guidance, the Sagamore achieved a sound financial status and greatly increased its circulation.

With the largest membership record in its history, the English Club has this year tried to hold meetings which would both stimulate literary interests and provide educational entertainment. Mr. Wilkinson, aided by Miss Allen, was again the club's faculty adviser. Toby Berman filled the office of President; Fred Holton, Secretary-Treasurer; John Chmielinski was Program Chairman, and Nancy Williams, Chairman of refreshments.

In the fall, a trip was taken to the historical shrines of Concord and Lexington, and in the spring the club journeyed to Salem. An innovation for the club was the contest for book awards won by Priscilla Cohen in Poetry and Sumner Libby and William White in Prose. Highlight of the year was the Christmas play given before the whole school and directed by Miss Allen.

A branch of the English Club is the Literary Circle meeting once a month under the guidance of Miss Lewis. There, new and recent books are discussed and commented upon. One of the most interesting meetings of this group was the "Information, Please" program which dealt with literary subjects and revealed a surprising store of knowledge among the participants.

The library staff is a voluntary service organization of about a hundred students. Two boys and two girls work during each period, with several helpers before and after school, each assigned to particular duties in the library. The boys manage the circulation, charging and discharging books. They also file pamphlet material and are always ready to do errands. It is the girls who take the attendance slips to study rooms, do simple mending, prepare magazines for circulation, and write some of the overdue notices.

In addition to helping in the library, the entire group gathers for a social and literary meeting once a month. Paul Seamans presides over these meetings, assisted by Richard Duffett as Vice-President, Virginia Eldridge and Alice Cormick are Secretary and Treasurer respectively, while the representative from Akers House is Arline Broude.

Just as the staff's services would not be complete without an impressive Book Week program presented to the school, the staff would be lost without the cheerful guidance of Mrs. Siebens and Miss LaPointe.

One of the older and more distinguished institutions at Brookline, the Dramatic Society has contributed immensely to the welfare of the school. It has promoted the Annual Scholarship Dramatics performances, the purpose of which is to raise funds for scholarship awards for students desirous of furthering their education. This year the Society gave the school a new fund named the Louise A. Hannon Assembly Fund. The money accumulated in this fund will be used to secure speakers for future auditorium programs. Miss Hannon is regularly in charge of all dramatic coaching activities, but because of illness, was replaced for this year by Mrs. Burke. Mr. Wendell Smith is director of the business activities, which have provided the Society with one of the richest treasuries in the school. Under the student leadership of Jack Dreyfuss as President and Gilda Berman as Secretary-Treasurer, the dramatist's activities during this season were mainly two-fold—consisting of a presentation of three one-act plays in the fall, and the J. Murray Kay Prize Speaking Contest, supervised by Mrs. Burke. While the latter is open to the competition of the entire school, members of the Society nearly always carry off the honors.

The Stage and Executive Staff was divided into four sections, each working in coordination with the Dramatic Society. Although little known to the School at large, the members were responsible for all the behind-scenes work of the three one-act plays, Prize Speaking, and Kaarina.

The costume committee, headed this year by Pris Cohen, consisted of Edna Simons, Barbara Alpern, and Elaine Smithers. This group was responsible for every costume used in the production, measurements and dressing rooms.

Perhaps the most interesting committee was Harold Bornstein's 1941 stage staff of Jerry Hermanson, Alan Schein, Irving Granofsky, John Walsh, Eugene Rubin, and Sandy Lesberg. They created the entire setting and thus spent a great amount of their spare time climbing precariously over the maze of catwalks and cross beams.

Props were in the charge of Jeanne Scheinfeldt, assisted by Jane Driscoll, Marie Morrison, Dorothy Driscoll, Virginia Berman, and Florence Hoffman. This group planned for all necessary material for productions and figured out set-changing.

Chief Electrician Arnold Ulin, led Herb Sandberg, Paul Daitch, Matthew Stern, and Eugene Rubin in the preparation of correct lighting. This required the mounting of lights, focusing, blending of colors, connecting and operating of the switchboard.

Prize Speaking is one of the highlights of Brookline's social season. Prize Speaking competition is an idea promoted by the J. Murray Kay Committee, which each year makes substantial book awards to the winners.

This year an unusual decision made by the judges, "bouqueted" nine of the twelve contestants either as winners or deserving of honorable mention. Arnold Ulin, convincingly rendering as his selection Galsworthy's Justice, triumphed over his other five male competitors. Since the judges could not determine any other single male individual for honorable mention, they honored Edwin Frank's selection from Hamlet, Semour Lesberg's The White Steed, Leonard Howitz's John Brown's Body, Melvin Gordon's Vive La France, and Alan Schein's Commencement.

Beverly Schlager, reciting Whiteoaks, triumphed delightfully in the feminine competition. Esther Waters with a ballad from Iolanthe and Sydelle Singer's Aria Da Capo shared honorable mention. Adele Sanger in St. Joan, June Scholnick in Macbeth, and Pierrette Mettetal in Les Romanesques, completed the program.

This year's contestants were coached by Mrs. Burke, well known in theatrical circles. Prize Speaking's reputation has been due to the efforts of its regular coach, Miss Louise Hannon, who this year was unable to fill her regular duties.

Even though this year the Debating Society was greatly handicapped by the loss of their coach of many years, Miss Louise Hannon, they nevertheless went ahead with plans for an active season of debating. President George Flashenberg ably endeavored to keep the organization running smoothly, being assisted by Robert Langer as Secretary-Treasurer and Gerald Gillerman as Moderator.

This year's schedule included provisions for four groups of debators including, at the time of the Arlington debate in April, on the senior team, Toby Berman, Robert Langer, and Emmanuel Abrams; on the second juniors, Gerald Gillerman, Eugene Brody, and Stanley Feldberg; a Junior Varsity squad composed of sophomores Bert Rabinowitz, Melvin Gordon, and Richard Gilbert; and a freshman team of Alan Alpern, Myron Sharaf, and Robert Miller. The society's 1941 leading exponents of "Resolved, That . . . " were George Flashenberg, Toby Berman, Emmanuel Abrams, and Robert Langer. In addition to a series of debates among the organization's members, they also held three inter-scholastic debates during the season.

The active enrollment of thirty-five members, largest in recent years, was indeed a wonderful tribute to Miss Hannon's great interest in the organization, its past and future.

This year, the Choral Reading group under Mr. Flemings' direction has consisted of a limited group of 18 to 20 students, the best size for interpretive work of this sort. The Juniors, for other classes were excluded to limit the number, have met in the twenty minute study of the fourth period to keep the group more closely together and to make it possible for everyone to attend.

The school was agreeably entertained by them in an auditorium period that was given in the Spring. By concentrating solely upon a dramatic play of Archibald McLeish called "Panic," Mr. Flemings tried to teach all the fine points of mass reading. Last year, when the group was originated, short and diversified selections were used, but "Panic" offered unusual opportunities for the group as it described the bank closures of 1934, switching from the street reactions to the financiers' offices.

"Choral reading," says Mr. Flemings, "is an excellent device for interpreting both poetry and drama. By having to speak clearly, and at the same time trying to give feeling to what they are reading, pupils are trained for interpretive reading and are given a deeper appreciation of all literature."

Recreation through singing might well be the theme of the Glee Club. This large organization gathers frequently to sing for their own entertainment. Once a year, however, Brookline's vocalists promote their own auditorium program in which they display the result of all their endeavors.

Under the direction of faculty adviser Mr. William Burbank, who is incidentally the head of the Music Department, the group gains not only pleasure, but also increased knowledge and culture. For, as Mr. Burbank states, "Music appreciation is a distinct sign of refinement and learning."

The requirements for enrolling in this musical organization are very simple. They consist merely of being able to carry a tune and of evidencing a genuine love and appreciation for music. This year the membership approximated one hundred.

It is worthwhile to note that the male vocal representation is increasing, discrediting the Brookline idea that glee club singing is "sissified." Today, perhaps more than ever before in modern times assemblies of people who wish to enjoy the pleasures of singing with a group, but who have not great voices, are becoming increasingly popular.

The Brookline Band has been the center of attraction this season as Kaarina successfully endeavored to raise money for Band uniforms. No longer will the Musicians be forced to march in white sweaters and slacks, but in the future they will be as well-dressed as any similar group. Meanwhile the object of this attraction rehearsed regularly every Thursday after school hours.

Though best known to those who brave the cold to witness football contests, the Band also played on many other memorable occasions. They cooperated with the cheerleaders to play music for rallies and other pep meetings of the student body, marched in the Memorial Day Parade, and kept the School in step on Class Day. Naturally, the Band played entrance and exit music for the auditorium periods not served by the orchestra, and then presented a full period of entertainment in the Spring of the year. This program was played twice, once for the upper and again for the lower houses. Often, the members played elsewhere when requested, on such occasions as civic or patriotic parades and meetings.

Brookline's renowned orchestra is composed of all students who play instruments suitable for such work and who haven't completely ignored serious music in this age of swing. The numerous members have extensive rehearsal sessions every Tuesday after school, for their broad program of providing musical enjoyment for the entire school.

Perhaps more than any other organization, the orchestra is brought to the School's attention. Their performances affect the students most directly when they play entrance and exit music for the auditorium programs throughout the year. But their most impressive contribution occurs in the Spring of each year, when the orchestra presents two full auditorium periods of orchestral master works for all the houses. Then too, the nearly-professional members played incidental music at the Dramatic Society annual plays, J. Murray Kay Prize Speaking, Boy Scout Week observance held in February at the Brookline Town Hall, the Governor's luncheon of the annual Massachusetts Safety Conference at the Hotel Statler in April, the Evening School and High School graduations, and many other functions. The past several years have also seen Mr. Joslin as orchestra director, lead his members to new acclaim over the radio on Brookline High School's numerous presentations.

An honorary society for musicians, the Orpheus Ensemble, founded in 1935, is composed of the elite of Brookline musical talent. This group contains only regular school orchestra members, who in Mr. Burbank's opinion have outstanding ability, and meets each Monday afternoon for practice and training. Then too, the members hear talks on subjects of musical interest.

Such a small circle is often called upon to play at such functions as Rotary Club and Women's Club meetings, Brookline Music School Concerts, radio programs, Library teas, and auditorium periods. Not content to garner merely these laurels, the Orpheus has participated in other activities, even having had several suppers given in their honor.

An explanation for the extraordinary success of the Orpheus Ensemble is due in main to its composition. Mr. Burbank has gathered many who play in orchestra and chamber music societies outside of school and wish to advance in their musical knowledge. As this group is necessarily limited in size, there must be some limitation on the instruments used. Thus, the Orpheus includes the violin, clarinet, flute, French horn, bass viol, trumpet, bassoon, and piano.

This year's Camera Club, under the able leadership of its faculty adviser, Mr. Alfred Webber, and its president, Lloyd Sanford, was one of the most active, successful, and "different" organizations in the school.

At semi-monthly meetings, Camera Club members received instruction in the various branches of photography. Beginners saw demonstrations by the more seasoned members in taking, developing, printing, and enlarging pictures. In small informal groups, many subjects, such as color photography, composition, and night photography were discussed. As incentives for taking good pictures for the club's varied contests, the members were offered substantial cash and equipment prizes. These contests have offered many new ideas in subject matter, including scavenger hunts to fit pictures to the titles Smooth and It's Cold, and a novel quiz on photography. But perhaps the most important feature was the opportunity to receive constructive criticism upon the accomplishments of the members. As a finale for a splendid year, the Camera Club succeeded in winning second prize at the annual Massachusetts High School Camera Club Exhibition. They captured five prizes, Lloyd Sanford receiving four prizes, and Dick Honthumb, one. Here is certainly an excellent record, which will be difficult to better.

This year the Science club was perhaps the most progressive organization of the school. It had a program covering phases of science interesting to every one from freshman to graduate.

Early in the year, several groups were formed to promote interest in various specific branches of high school science. In the chemistry group, about twenty-five members studied such subjects as electroplating, under the leadership of Claude Corty. The physics group of fifteen under Herbert Sandberg, tried to awaken interest in higher physics through the building of individual projects. Leonard Horwitz's dozen followers of geology made various trips to study rock formations. Those interested in biology battled with bacteria under the leadership of Dolly Driscoll.

Under the leadership of Mr. Cooper, faculty adviser; Dolly Driscoll, president; Arnold Ulin, vice-president; Claude Corty, secretary; and Leonard Horwitz, treasurer; the entire club had various interesting meetings. At this time such subjects as light, sound-recording, electricity, and heavy water were discussed. Several outside speakers helped to give a wider view of the grand world of science.

If the purpose of a club is to combine education and fun, then it can be said that this year the Science club has been most successful in achieving its purpose.

One of the lesser known organizations at Brookline High School, but nevertheless a very active one, the Stamp Club busily engages itself in all fields of stamp activities. It provides a grand opportunity for the philatelists to improve their stamp collections, and to increase their knowledge of their hobby. The club sponsors its own intra-club exhibitions, and usually participates in inter-scholastic contests during the course of a year. Then too, all members are encouraged to give talks upon philatelic subjects and to bring in their own collections, whatever value they may be. Often an outside speaker is secured and discusses his particular philatelic interests, be it pre-cancels, first day covers, or the like. As a special treat this year, Miss Bruce of the faculty spoke on her unusual group of bird and animal stamps.

The club is directed by Mr. Wendell Smith, a collector of stamps himself. President Charles Raleigh, Vice-President Lewis White, and Secretary-Treasurer Stanley Siegel, would have one always remember that philately is "the hobby of Kings, and the King of hobbies."

The Chess Club boasts of a unique beginning. During the early nineteen hundreds, many students were in the habit of bringing folding pocket sets to class and, while to all outward appearances they were studying most industriously, the students were actually conducting chess tournaments. However, some of the older teachers have confessed that though they might have checkmated it at the start, they nevertheless allowed it to continue and flourish into its present vigorous existence. Most helpful in that growth was the oversight given it by Mr. Elmer Case, then head of the Mathematics Department, and himself a master player of the old Boston Chess Club.

This organization has been under the continual guidance of Miss Grace Allen for the last eighteen years. She herself was a "member" of that early clandestine club. The group is moderate in size, and its offices are administered by the following officers: Lionel Perlo, President; Macey Feingold, Vice-President; Arthur Carlin, Treasurer.

A few of its former members have followed up the hobby and today this small group enjoys a high ranking in local chess circles.

If any of you have inquired about the diligent group of students working in the Art Rooms every Tuesday afternoon, you may have discovered that the Poster Club was in session. Organized this year and chartered by the School Council, it was the idea of Martin Elinoff to establish an organization which would handle the posters and publicity demands of all the groups in the high school. Posters were made this year particularly for the Boys' Club, the Girls' League, Parents Night, and Dramatics. Then too, the club gave students who were unable to take Art because of a crowded school curriculum, an opportunity to develop their artistic abilities and creative talents. There was a great variety of work to be done for students who wished to become proficient at drawing, sketching, lettering, and design. Those who were unable to draw but who possessed executive ability were encouraged to join, as business problems of dues and expenditures had to be solved, besides those of distribution.

In March, a large open meeting was arranged under the chairmanship of Adolphe Cavallo, with Mr. Arthur Lougee as the guest speaker.

Its officers have made the club a huge success and it has already won for itself an excellent reputation in the High School.

"Good afternoon, ladies and gentlemen. This is the Brookline High School Radio Club, the Mercureans, presenting its regular Thursday afternoon program, "Simple Secrets of Science."

Reorganized and renamed the Mercureans, the Radio Club has well lived up to its motto of "vox per auras." Ten broadcasts were given over WBZ on scientific phenomena and a series of six programs on poetry reading and comprehension were presented over WHDH.

Supervised by Mr. Gould, long experienced in radio work, Miss Lewis, and Mr. Miller, the purpose of the club was to help train those interested in radio as a career and to build up a background of appreciation and understanding concerning the work done behind the scenes to prepare a broadcast. William Addelson served as President, Helen Bracken held the office of Vice-President, and Robert Langer was Secretary-Treasurer, while the rest of the Mercureans were divided up into committees. Ted Gilman was in charge of the Program Committee; Bob Wyner headed the Continuity, or script-writing group and Eldon Scott Cohen was chairman of Publicity.

It's five minutes before the start of the fourth period and the white-clad Lunchroom Staff start their work for the day. This staff is a carefully selected group of boys and girls who have an entire period free; they must be passing in all subjects and endorsed by their Housemasters.

At the sound of the bell, the spotlessly clean lunch room is filled with ravenous students who assail the various counters. While Mr. Bates and his Marshal Force keep the noise down to "a gentle roar," the Lunch Room Staff is kept busy serving the food, handling the dishes and trays, keeping the counters filled, and often voluntarily helping with the dishes. Together the two groups see to it that plates are scraped, papers are deposited in proper receptacles, and trays are carefully stacked.

To enable Brookline to provide enjoyable, nourishing food, Mrs. Potter and Mrs. Graham jointly supervise lunchroom administration. Working with them is a group of highly experienced and trained women, always ready and eager to help the students. With such cooperation it is not surprising that the Brookline High lunchroom has such great efficiency.

Since 1936, Brookline's students wandering by the Domestic Science Department, have been lured nearer by the sweet odors of the Foods Club in action. First composed solely of the fairer sex, the past several seasons saw interested males form their own branch. Both groups, though sometimes functioning as separate units, are under the capable direction of Miss South, and membership is open to all passing students.

The morning notices often state that there will be a trip to a nearby factory or other spot of particular interest to future cooks and chefs. Such trips are designed to educate all in the importance of foods. This may appear slightly unnecessary, but the value of good cooking is often neglected in this modern age. At regular meetings, menues are suggested for parties, balanced meals are planned and novel culinary ideas are discussed. Their activities are not merely confined to such self-education, but the Foods Club cooperates fully with other school organizations. For example, to insure the success of Kaarina, the girls and boys made candy to be sold at the performance.

The presentation of the operetta, Kaarina, created a sensation. It was different: it was new; it was successful! But it was the people behind the scenes that made it a hit. First, Mr. Gould wrote the lyrics. Then Mr. Burbank was made chief coach, and with Mr. Flemings and Mr. Gould, proceeded to organize the cast and business people necessary to produce the operetta. Assisting, were other teachers and students. Miss Horn and Miss Parker directed the art work. Mr. Joslin managed the orchestral activities, and Mrs. Potter, Miss N. Allen, Mr. W. Smith, Mr. C. Smith, and Mr. Brigham also lent a helping hand. This is one of the first cooperative groups in many years involving many of the important organizations of the school. These were the Boys' Club, Band, Touchdown Club, French Club, Sagamore, Boys' and Girls' Foods Clubs, Girls' League, English Club, Orchestra, and Boys' and Girls' Glee Clubs.

This great group of workers coordinated their efforts for one great purpose, a fund from which uniforms for the school band could be purchased, and this goal was realized.

1941 saw Brookline High School send five representatives to the first session of the Students Institute of National Government held in Washington, D. C. The fortunate boys, chosen because of their high scholarship and general leadership in school life were Morton Swartz, Jim Feinberg, Bob Langer, Toby Berman, and Bob Baker. The committee responsible for the selection of these delegates was composed of Headmaster Ringer, Mr. Kepner, head of Social Studies Department, and Mr. Miller.

In order to see the workings of our government and democracy in action, this group, headed by Mr. and Mrs. Miller, spent March 6-11 in the nation's capital. At this Institute were more than two hundred students from schools east of the Mississippi.

When Brookline's delegates returned, they presented an auditorium period to inform the community of their experiences. They visited Mount Vernon, Washington Monument, the White House, the Department of Interior, the Pan-American Union, Lee's Mansion, Annapolis, the Supreme Court, both houses of Congress, the Department of the Interior, the Library of Congress, Lincoln's Memorial, and neighboring Virginia and Maryland. Also interesting was a dinner with Brookline alumnus Mr. Shooshan, and discussions with Jusice Frankfurter, Dr. Clauge, Representative Martin, and their own Senator and Representative. After reading this imposing list there can be no question regarding the valuable opportunities afforded by the Institute. In a most positive sense the Brookline representatives gained a better understanding and appreciation of American democracy at work.
